

Conflict Catcher can help you to determine what startup file, or combination of startup files are causing your problems. You must be experiencing a problem to run a conflict test. It is not meant as preventative medicine. If your problem is intermittent, please see the section on intermittent problems in the manual.

- Conflict Test: To start a conflict test, click this button. If the “Log Conflict Tests” option is enabled, Conflict Catcher will ask you to identify the problem you are experiencing. The first thing that Conflict Catcher will do is disable all of the startup files. This will prove whether or not the problem you are experiencing is actually a startup file problem. If you started the test from the Finder, Conflict Catcher will ask you to restart before beginning the test. At this time, you can click on any startup files that must remain on during the test.
