

Click OK to continue the Conflict Test. Conflict Catcher will start the computer with none of the startup files in the test enabled. At this time, you should see if the problem you were experiencing exists. Your problem can be anything at all, from a crash at startup to an oddity in printing. After you have determined if the problem is there, restart the computer to tell Conflict Catcher the results.

If the problem still exists, then it is not a startup file conflict. Conflict Catcher will inform you of a couple possible reasons for your problem (see the manual for more details).

If the problem is gone, the test continues to find the culprit(s). Conflict Catcher will continue to select the startup files to enable/disable.
