AN INVITATION TO THE REVOLUTION

Face it.

The world moves faster these days. From information to current events, just keeping up is becoming the most pressing challenge of the day. Businesses know it. Governments know it. And you know it. If you're one of the tens of millions of Internet users, you've already experienced the exhilaration of a world in transition. The widespread growth of the global Internet is virtually unmatched by any other technology in history. And with new generations of technology emerging every day, there is no doubt that the Internet is going to change the way you work, learn, and live.

Whether you're a technologist, a developer, or simply a user, you have a stake in how it all plays out. And the Internet Society is there to make sure that the Internet works for you.

Since 1992, the Internet Society has been recognized worldwide as a critical component in the evolution and globalization of the Internet and its related technologies. From commerce to education to social issues, our goal is to enhance the availability of the Internet on the widest possible scale.

Who are our members?

With a consistently growing number of organizational and individual members in 125 countries, the Internet Society is composed of technologists, developers, educators, researchers, government representatives, and businesspeople, all with one common goal: to ensure global cooperation and coordination for the Internet and its internetworking technologies and applications.

Why the Internet Society?

Among many other goals, the Internet Society supports and encourages

- * the development, maintenance, evolution, and dissemination of standards for the Internet and its internetworking technologies and applications;
- * the growth of Internet architecture;
- * Internet-related education and research;
- * assistance to technologically developing countries, areas, and peoples in implementing and evolving their Internet infrastructure and use; and
- * liaisons with other organizations, governments, and the general public for coordination, collaboration, and education.

Your support yields limitless returns.

As a member of the Internet Society, you can help foster the evolution of the Internet and its use. In addition, as an Internet Society member, you're entitled to several key benefits, including:

- * A one-year subscription to OnTheInternet, the Internet Society's international magazine reporting on critical issues surrounding Internet growth, development, and use.
- * Discounts on Internet Society conferences, seminars, events, and workshops, including the annual International Networking conference.
- * The opportunity to become actively involved in your local Internet Society chapter.
- * Access to Internet-related data and research.

Most important, your membership enables us to work for you and your future.

Don't be left behind. Join the revolution.
