

Who made it?

The BeerStack was "programmed" and designed by Robert Bush, a home-brewer since 1989.

It was intended to be of help for me to keep track of recipes, ingredients and general information about my own batches. I later added info on different beer styles so that I could easily look up how a certain type of beer was supposed to be brewed.

After giving an early version to a friend that found it useful I decided to let more people take part of The BeerStack and maybe, if they liked it, use it.

The version you have right now is not the one I use. I add information as I gain experience with new yeast strains, try more beer, brew more batches etc. So if you try it for a while and find that you like it, you will get a later version if you register. See "How to register".