About Generation X Software

Generation X Software is quite possibly the most embarrassing name imaginable for a company. Don't ask how we chose it; we're mortified every time we see it. But we're too lazy to change all the documents and tee-shirts now, so it'll have to do.

Generation X was started in a basement and will continue to exist in a basement for the rest of eternity. We have no plans to expand. In fact, we have no plans whatsoever. We just wrote this one silly program, found it useful, and decided to share it with the world. Sort of like typhus.

The author of Guy Friday, Matthew Klein, graduated from Yale University in 1990. He currently resides in Palo Alto, CA and attends Stanford Business School.