

Today is the first day of school and our teacher is making us write a paper about our "Summer Vacation". Well, this year my family and I decided to drive to [Place]. It was a [Number]-hour drive from our house and I had to sit in the backseat with my little brother, [Name of a Boy] that whole time! Now you have to understand, my little brother is very [Adjective] and after listening to him [Verb] the whole trip, I was about ready to scream by the time we got there.

When we finally arrived, we all were looking forward to visiting the famous [Proper Noun]-World amusement park. When we got there, we rode lots of the famous rides, like "the [Adjective] [Plural Noun]" ride and "the [Verb ending in -ing] [Noun]" ride (which made me sick, by the way...)

For lunch, we went to a snack bar and bought a $[Number] plate of hot [Plural Noun]. They tasted just like the [Adjective] [Name of Food] that the school serves for lunch.

The trip home was about the same as the one going. This time, though, my little brother kept yelling "[Exclamation]!" for no reason at all. Very annoying...

That was my summer vacation. As terrible as it was, I've already started counting the days until the next one...