Click Cast List or Credits to see a list of performers or production staff from Cinebooks' Motion Picture Guide.

Note: These buttons are present when an Cinebooks review is available. If no Cinebooks review is available, see the Leonard Maltin or Roger Ebert review for an abbreviated cast list.

Every movie has a review by Leonard Maltin. Many movies have additional reviews by Roger Ebert, Pauline Kael, or Cinebooks' Motion Picture Guide.

All reviewers except Pauline Kael give movies a star rating, which appears above the review to the right of the Copy and Print buttons.

Click an icon in the Controller window to see the movie's MPAA rating (if available), format (color or black-and-white), availability (tape or laser disc), or Academy Award nominations and wins.

Note: You cannot search for simple conjunctions, prepositions, and pronouns, such as and, from, they, and so on. A search for these words would not be useful, as it would return nearly every title in Cinemania! However, you can include these words within a phrase enclosed in quotation marks.

You can speed up the search by limiting it to areas likely to contain the word or phrase you're looking for.

When you’ve finished making changes to your lists, click Save List.

Note: You can back up your ListMaker lists and comments, or move them to a different computer. ListMaker data files are stored in the directory to which you installed Cinemania, and have extension .LST. You can copy these files with File Manager, but can change them only with ListMaker.

To close ListMaker and return to where you were before, click the ListMaker button below the Contents list.

Click its name and the list appears in the Movies in list box.

Click the movie title to select a single movie. To select a range of movies, hold down SHIFT and click the beginning and end of the range of movies you want. To select movies from different parts of the list, hold down CTRL and click the movies you want.

You also can type a movie title directly into the Current Movie Selection box.

Note: If the title you type does not match a movie title in Cinemania ‘95, you cannot jump to information about the movie by clicking Go to Movie.

Changes you make to a list are not permanent until you click Save List. If you want to discard the changes you’ve made to a list, close ListMaker without saving changes.

Click in the Comments field and type your comments. Cinemania adds the comments to the information for the movie.

Cinemania will export your list in tab-delimited format. The movie title, year, your comments, and any additional pieces of information are separated by tabs for easy formatting in a spreadsheet or word processing document.

In the Export dialog box, type a filename for the export file, and then select the directory in which you'd like it saved.

Note: Cinemania does not allow you to save long filenames.

Cinemania exports the movie title, year, and your comments by default. Select the Include Additional Information box to include fact-box information, genre, and country.

You can open the export file in any application that reads raw text or tab-delimited format. A spreadsheet will usually produce the best results by putting each type of information in a separate column.

Click its name and the list appears in the Movies in list box.

Cinemania opens the standard Print dialog box, in which you can choose and set up the printer to which you want to print.
