About Textware:

Textware is a search and retrieval engine for DOS, Windows, or Macintosh computers. Textware uses the indexed database on the CD-ROM to allow for rapid search and retrieval of the data. To get help press F1 (on DOS) or use "Help" under the "Help" menu item (on Macintosh and Windows.) The articles from Newsbytes are organized in reverse chronological order on this CD-ROM (so that more recent, hence more important, articles are first.) Each article is referred to as a "Card" and may contain one or more pages of text. Each "Card" is an article straight from Newsbytes. You can search the entire database using keywords and will find articles covering telecommunications, computing trends, general computing news, Government, and special articles on UNIX, IBM, and Apple. Also included are reviews of software and hardware, editorials, stock reports, and more, collected from the archives of Newsbytes News Network.

Searches can be made for one or more words. When doing a search a "Hit List" is generated and can be viewed. This list contains summaries of "Card"s with an occurrence or occurrences of what was searched for. When viewing a "Card" in the "Hit List" the searched for words will appear highlighted.

Search Ideas:

Search for "Bill Gates."

Search for less known people such as "Steve Jobs."

Search for people, companies, products, or issues!

Search for dates by entering: "06/03/93", searches for June 3, 1993

Not every date has entries!
