

One still image in a movie.

Movies containing motion video and animation are made up of a series of frames, played in succession.