The Bear and the Bee...

is an illustrated children's story about a brave little Bee who seeks the hand of a grumpy Bear in marriage. This story is recommended for children under the age of nine. Each panel is interactive — touching an object in the panel causes the name of that object to pop up on screen. This should be good for motor coordination and may help spelling too

Installation:

This product is a Windows<sup>M</sup> Help file. It uses a utility called winhelp.exe as a control and display program. Winhelp is normally called from any Windows program's help menu — and loads a help file, prepared by the program developer, with context sensitive help for the program. As you will see it can also be used "stand-alone" as a reader for any properly formatted and compiled file.

First move bear_bee.ico, bear_bee.hlp, bear_bee.wri & bear_bee.txt to a suitable location on your hard disk. I use "c:\games" as an example here, but anywhere will do.

To run bear bee from the File Run... menu option, use a command of:

c:\windows\winhelp.exe c:\games\bear bee.hlp , but that would be a shame!

Better you should create a Program Manager entry for your child, using the command above, and bear_bee.ico as the icon. For more information about creating program items, see your Microsoft<sup>rst</sup> Windows manual in the Program Manager section.

About LeftJustified™...

LeftJustified Publiks™ is a publisher of electronic products: Books, Magazines, and Software. We depend on contributions from happy customers for our health and future. This product is shareware, that is, you get to use it before paying for it (we know software and believe us, given a good product, this is the ultimate in software contentment)! It is also much less costly for you, because it's cheaper to produce and distribute than products that use the retail channels. We think that both of these features make shareware a good investment. If you think so too, then please show us your support. More information, and a handy print-out registration form, are to be found within the product. Please look for other products from LeftJustified by scanning for the company name. We also publish materials that are of interest to adults. Thanks.
