

2010 All American Selections Award Winners

New Award Winning Flower and Vegetable Seeds

By Marie Iannotti, About.com Guide

Seeds for the 2010 All America Selection (AAS) Winners should be available in stores and catalogs this spring, so it's time to take a look. AAS was created as a means to test and market new flower and vegetable varieties, with the goal of being able to tell home gardeners which new introductions were actually worth trying. Some turn out to be all stars, like Kentucky Blue Pole Bean and Petunia F1 'Wave® Purple'. Others fall out of favor. But it is a nice way to give something new a try in your garden.

The ASS slogan is "Tested Nationally and Proven Locally". Whether they'll turn out to be winners in your garden is still to be proven, but see if any sound like a good fit for you garden plans this year.

You can access more info on current and past AAS winners, including where to purchase seed, at: <http://www.all-americanselections.org> You can also look for these selections as plants, this season at the nursery.

Images 1-9 of 9

Enter Gallery

[Echinacea purpurea
'PowWow Wild Berry'](#)

[Gaillardia F1 'Mesa
Yellow'](#)

[Marigold F1 Hybrid
African 'Moonsonq
Deep Orange'](#)

[Snapdragon F1
'Twinny Peach'](#)

Viola F1
'Endurio Sky Blue Martien'

Zinnia
'Double Zahara Cherry'

Zinnia
'Double Zahara Fire'

Zinnia 'Zahara Starlight Rose'

Watermelon F1 Hybrid
'Shiny Boy'

Click here to view online version.