

Type and hit enter to See

Written on July 17, 2010 at 1:17 pm by Bren

Bringing Glamour to the Garden

Filed under Garden Events, Photography {9 comments}

One of my favorite blooms from the OFA Short Course Trade Show.

Black Velvet Petunia by Ball 2010

Doesn't the ruffle of the petals on the Black Velvet Petunia (image above) make you want to get out the stiletto and rent a tux? It's no wonder at the 2010 OFA Short Course, Ball FloraPlant's new Black Velvet Petunia was announced as the winner of Greenhouse Grower magazine's Industry's Choice Award during its Medal of Excellence reception, July 12. The Black Petunia is the first thing that caught my eye as I visited Ball's booth at the OFA short Course Trade Show. I have not seen this color in any of the greenhouses I have visited this season.

I look forward to seeing her at the next major garden event where this bloom is sure to steal the show..... no rental required!

Busy in the Garden so please forgive me for not posting too much this week. The next share from my veggie garden will for sure fill your tummy and inspire you to plant some seeds!

← Next post Previous post →

Subscribe / Share

Article by Bren

My name is Bren and I'm a Midwest Artist specializing in Freelance Photography. I enjoy sharing from my neck of the woods all the wonderful things I find about gardening. I grow it, prepare it&share recipes from my Green world!

Bren tagged this post with: Ball Seed, Black, Glamour, OFA, petunia Read 149 articles by Bren

9 Comments Post a Comment