Weekend Blooms

What a hot week it has been and this weekend looks to be more of the same. I still am not going to complain because I still remember last winters long, long days. LOL!

Out in the garden now there is a riot of sounds and it sounds like August already but I guess it is not far away now. I saw a full grown Katydid in the garden this week and it seems too early to me.

Summer seems to be flying by and I hate to see it. Before you know it the children will be going back to school here the last of August.

Some flowers are waning in the garden from the heat and others are getting ready for fall blooms.

Anemone 'Queen Charlotte' is getting her buds for blooming.

Coreopsis 'Limerock Ruby' has another flush of blooms since it was deadheaded.

Lona Dawn

The 'Easy Does It' rose bush has another flush of blooms. This rose has been such a beautiful addition to the rose bed this summer and it just blooms and blooms. I recommend it for those who like the color and want a great bloomer. This winter will be the judge of its hardiness for our zone 5 Ohio winters.

Another new flower that I have really enjoyed this summer is the Gaillardia 'Mesa Yellow'. It so far has stayed a compact plant with continuous blooms. I do not think it is going to be a leggy bloomer like the Burgundy gaillardia that I have had for years but it is still in its first year so we shall see. The picture is not the best because it was taken in the high sun.

The Elephant Ear in the tub is still growing and putting on giant leaves. It likes the tub and its home along the woodland bed. The three new kittens from a dumped off cat has been playing with the leaves. They also like setting in my dahlia planters and anywhere else they can climb into. As if we needed more feral cats around here.

Heuchera's 'Amethyst Mist' and 'Palace Purple' are blooming.

Eupatorium 'Chocolate' Snake Root is growing well and I love the foliage on it. It looks like a leaf miner is liking the leaves too.

The new Asiatic Lily 'Frisco' that I got for half price is blooming.

This Gladiolus that just showed up one summer from out of the blue is pretty with its dark peach blooms. Free flowers are always welcome.

This white 'Snow Princess' lily is just so pretty. I love pure white blooms in the garden and this one has very large ones.

These will likely be the last of the lilies blooming this summer unless Stella de Oro has a few more.

Tall Phlox 'Nora Leigh' is looking pretty now as the blooms unfold. The variegated foliage makes it a favorite of my phlox.

Phlox 'Bright Eyes' and 'David' white are still looking pretty but my 'Adonis' pink is looking sad. Its blooms are about spent and I deadheaded it this week. I have fought the mildew on all of the phlox this summer, even on those that are not suppose to get mildew.

Impatiens double blooming 'Rose' looks pretty in the...

.....old birdbath.
All of the water splashes out of this birdbath and it was leaking so it became a planter.

A new Astilbe 'Delft Lace' has been added to the shady flower bed. It is a compact astilbe with wonderful foliage and is suppose to have pink blooms in late spring.
It was another half price bargain.

Hydrangea 'Alpen Glow' is still looking pretty.

The Butterfly plant from seeds that Darla from "More Family and Friends" shared is getting some buds.

Nepeta 'Walkers Low' Catmint is still spreading and blooming.
