

Today on DairyReporter.com

- Milk proteins may aid post exercise fluid retention
- New Chr. Hansen cultures aim to improve yoghurt drink texture
- Danone develops framework for optimizing probiotic-based functional foods
- Paper outlines how to lure lactose intolerant consumers back to dairy
- DairyCo breaks down changes in share of dairy pie
- Is reformulation still high on the industry agenda?

Related Industry News

- No significant risk in using recycled hot water in meat decontamination - EFSA
- Court bans ads claiming single-serve PET bottles pose health risk
- Two global stevia trade associations launched this week
- Whey protein: New opportunity for sports drinks makers

Breaking News on Dairy Processing & Markets

Daily 06-Oct-2010

Forward to a colleague

ACCESS FULL STORIES

Milk proteins may aid post exercise fluid retention

Milk proteins could be more effective than carbohydrates at aiding fluid retention after exercise, according to new research... Read

New Chr. Hansen cultures aim to improve yoghurt drink texture

Chr. Hansen has launched new cultures specifically to improve the texture and mouthfeel of drinking yoghurts so manufacturers do not have to turn to thickeners... Read

Danone develops framework for optimizing probiotic-based functional foods

Mapping how the gut microbiota respond to probiotic strains may help produce a framework for "evaluating and optimizing probiotic-based functional foods", say researchers from Danone and Harvard... Read

Paper outlines how to lure lactose intolerant consumers back to dairy

Support from independent sources and targeted marketing campaigns are the keys to convincing lactose intolerant consumers to come back to dairy, according to a new report from the Innovation Center for US Dairy... Read

DairyCo breaks down changes in share of dairy pie

Supermarkets in the UK are taking a bigger and bigger share of profits from the dairy sector according to a DairyCo report on the margins of farmers, processors and retailers... Read

NEWS IN BRIEF

Is reformulation still high on the industry agenda?

With the Food Standards Agency (FSA) now focusing on food safety, and nutrition falling under the Department of Health's (DoH's) umbrella, where does this leave the FSA's controversial salt, saturated fat and sugar reduction campaign?... Read

All News Headlines for: October | September | August

SPONSORED LINK

Fruit'nSweet - Crystalline Fructose by GBI

The sweetest nutritive sweetener. NON- GMO, Sweeter than sugar - 1.2 to 1.7 times the sweetness of sucrose, Flavor Enhancer, Slow release energy, Low Glycemic Index, Improved texture and mouth feel, Improved shelf life, Excellent Solubility, Excellent humectant's properties... Click Here

Upcoming Live Webinars

Functional food starches - how they can create more than texture

Hear Tate & Lyle's starch experts about selecting the functional starch with the best performance - whether you're aiming to develop textures that are creamier, crispier, smoother, thicker or looking for that one starch that fits your processing conditions

RELATED INDUSTRY NEWS

No significant risk in using recycled hot water in meat decontamination - EFSA

Using hot recycled water as a decontamination technique for meat carcasses is as effective as hot potable water, according to the European Food Safety Authority (EFSA)... Read

Court bans ads claiming single-serve PET bottles pose health risk

A US court has issued an injunction against a steel container producer from making claims in advertisements that PET water bottles could pose a health risk to the public... Read

Two global stevia trade associations launched this week

Suppliers and stakeholders in the stevia industry are organising to maintain standards and pursue scientific enquiry into the use of stevia sweeteners. But two trade organisations have been announced this week, with very different membership criteria and ostensibly different aims... Read

Whey protein: New opportunity for sports drinks makers

Incorporating whey protein into exercise recovery beverages could open a lucrative new market for sports drinks manufacturers, according to research commissioned by performance nutrition company Volac... Read

WEEKLY COMMENT

Bisphenol A on the brink?

To BPA or not to BPA? While the European Food Safety Authority (EFSA) backed the continued use of bisphenol A last week, the real question is whether the verdict was a full-blown reprieve for the controversial chemical or merely a stay of execution... Read

CONFERENCE

State of the weight management market: After Atkins and beyond

The weight management market is estimated by some to be worth $5bn. Don Montuori from Packaged Facts helps us understand the success and failures of current dietary programs and how to predict the next big thing. This webinar is part of the WeightManagement2010 virtual conference and expo. Free registration starts here..... Click Here

PREVIOUS HEADLINES

Court overturns Ohio ban on rbST-free milk labeling

A district court has overturned an Ohio state ban on the labeling of milk as free from artificial hormones, saying that there is a compositional difference between milk from cows treated with growth hormone and untreated cows... Read

Dairy and whisky firms test novel technology to clean pipes

A novel technology that uses air instead of gallons of water and cleaning agents to clean process pipe work is being installed at a UK whisky manufacturer this week and will shortly be tested by a UK dairy manufacturer... Read

SPECIAL EDITION: ROBOTICS

Advancing technology and lower costs could fuel meat sector uptake of robotics

Greater hygiene, improved consistency of operation and greater productivity are all key advantages to be realised from using robotics in meat processing and packaging, said the German Institute of Food Technologies (DIL)... Read

Tetra Pak plan to cease production at UK plant on falling carton demand

Tetra Pak said a change in market conditions is the reason behind its proposal to stop production at a UK carton plant and cut up to 150 jobs... Read

Glanbia R&D execs discuss failed bid to split company

At the annual meeting of Food for Health Ireland (FHI) in Cork, two R&D executives at Glanbia discussed the recent move to split the company... Watch

NEWS IN BRIEF

USDA says Italian dairy sector is on the mend despite price war

The Italian dairy sector is starting to look up after a long period of restructuring that forced more than 30,000 farmers to shut down but tensions remain between producers and processors over prices, according to a USDA report... Read