Bull Turns Bear on USDA Quarterly Stocks

Posted on 28 March 2013 by Andy Eubank

Bull turns bear The Hoosier Ag Today headline prior to Thursday's USDA quarterly stocks report was Market Expecting Bullish Report. In the words of analyst Arlan Suderman the market was caught leaning the wrong way and a sharp futures market selloff followed shortly after the release. "I was not at all surprised," he told HAT. [...]

Energy - Fair Oaks Dairy Successfully Using Waste to Power Fleet

Posted on 28 March 2013 by Andy Eubank

Officials from the Department of Energy say Fair Oaks Farms is a pacesetter for the dairy industry. The Indiana farm has used electricity generated by the manure gathered from its own barn floors to power milking equipment, barns, a cheese factory and more for years. Now - the farm is using manure to fuel its [...]

HAT Weather Outlook with Rob Wasson

Afternoon temperatures will push into the upper 40s to lower 50s today and in the mid 50s by tomorrow. High pressure will keep most of the state dry today. Scattered showers will be possible near Evansville. Rain will move in statewide this weekend. Low pressure and a cold front will deliver some showers Saturday night. A few light rain showers will be possible Easter Sunday and Monday morning. Rain totals will range from .25" up to .75", with isolated 1.0" amounts. The extended two week forecast calls for near average temperatures and above normal rainfall statewide.
