EPISODE #241

“FURY”

An old friend returns with a decidedly unfriendly plot to destroy Voyager.

Voyager comes across a shuttle piloted by former crewmember Kes, and Janeway beams her aboard. In engineering, she draws power from the warp core, killing B'Elanna in the process and then disappearing. Suddenly, a younger Kes reappears, but it is in the past. Voyager has only been in the Delta Quadrant for 56 days. The newest Kes makes her way to the Kes of the past and renders her unconscious. All the while, the crew is unaware that this evil Kes from the future is onboard.

Vidian ships on Voyager's sensors are suddenly gone, but space vacuoles lie ahead. Janeway plans to allow the ship to auto-navigate them through the danger. Tuvok suggests they send the Delta Flyer to chart the course first, but the rest of the crew doesn't understand. He senses something is wrong and even has visions of Naomi Wildman, who isn't born yet, but he isn't sure of what he is experiencing. Secretly, Kes sends an encrypted transmission to the Vidian leader offering tactical data to help him ambush the ship in exchange for safe passage to her Okampan home world.

When Tuvok shares his experience with Janeway, the Captain places him under a continuous proximity scan. She is even more alarmed when she learns that Ensign Wildman is pregnant. Soon, Tuvok's hallucinations grow stronger until he collapses. Upon examination of the proximity scans, Janeway finds a surge of tachyon particles, which are caused by temporal distortions. Meanwhile, Voyager comes under attack from the Vidian ship.

As the enemy ship attempts an access route through Voyager's hull, Janeway discovers the future Kes trying to escape with the unconscious Kes. She explains that in the future Janeway encouraged her to use her telepathic abilities to explore space, but she wasn't ready. When Kes tried to return to Okampa, she had changed too much and they didn't accept her. So she has come back to retrieve the past Kes, who she knows her people will accept, and to change the future by destroying Voyager. After the two struggle, Janeway is left with no choice but to kill Kes.

It is the future again, and Voyager detects Kes' distress signal. This time, Janeway and Tuvok remember what to do. After evacuating Deck 11 and raising the ship's shields, Janeway allows Kes to beam aboard. They shut down the warp core, and Kes is confronted with a holographic message of herself she taped after the last incident. Once she realizes her decision to leave Voyager was her own and that Janeway isn't the enemy, she agrees to return to Okampa, believing people will accept her for who she is.
