

Sheet1

WORD,C,16
orator
secessionist
emancipator
ample publisher
treasurer
pianist
librarian
boast
applicant
guardian
secede
columnist
debtor
physician elimination
editor
tyrant munitions
pedestrian

Sheet1

DEFINITION,C,250

a public speaker noted for skill and power in speaking one who withdraws from an organization (as a nation, church, or political party)

one who frees someone from someone else's control or power, especially, frees from slavery generous in size, scope or capacity; enough to satisfy a need one who makes generally known; one who sends out and offers for sale printed matter an officer of a club, business or government, who has charge of money taken in and paid out one who plays the piano

a person in charge of a library to praise one's own possessions, qualities or achievements one who makes a request for something one who protects from danger; one who legally has the care of the person or property of another to withdraw from an organization (as a nation, church, or political party) a person who writes a special or regular feature in a newspaper or magazine one that owes something to another a specialist in healing human diseases: a doctor of medicine the act or process of getting rid of, removing, or emptying one who corrects, revises, and prepares material for publication especially as an occupation a ruler with no legal limits on his or her power by law or constitution; a ruler who exercises total power harshly or cruelly; a person military supplies and equipment

a person who is walking

Sheet1

SENTENCE,C,80

James Buchanan was a skilled @, which probably helped him win the election.

The confederate @ would rather leave the union than give up his principles.

Lincoln is called the great @ because he worked to free the slaves.

There was @ proof at hand, more than enough needed to solve the mystery.

The @ of the book was anxious to have it widely distributed.

The @ of the United States had a big problem when the banks started to close.

After studying the piano for many years, she became a concert @.

The @ spent a good part of the day putting books back on the shelf.

He was able to @ of a very nice car, but not much else.

The @ for a loan had to fill out two request forms.

The little boy's @ was careful that he should never be in want of anything.

The southern states threatened to @ from the union if the law was passed.

The @ reported on important events in the daily newspaper.

The @ asked him if he could have more time to pay back the money.

The @ checked her blood pressure and temperature, and then prescribed medicine.

The president wanted nothing less than the complete @ of slavery from the Union.

The @ read through the pieces, made some corrections, and sent them to print.

The @ ruled with no mercy, and the people had no defense against him.

The Confederates never had enough weapons, since the north made the @.

The cars stopped to let the @ go by.