

Sheet1

WORD,C,16 DEFINITION,C,250

talent	the natural abilities of a person; a special often creative or artistic ability remedy	medicine or treatment that cures or relieves; something that corrects a wro limit	a boundary line; a point beyond which a person or thing cannot go campaign	a connected series of activities intended to bring about a particular result ballot	a sheet of paper used to cast a vote
mortal	capable of causing death; a human being; able to die crystal	a quartz that is transparent; clear glass of very good quality
address	the directions for delivery on mail
power	possession of control or authority; physical or mental strength havoc	wide and general destruction; great confusion and disorder traveled	journeyed from place to place, or to a distant place nomination	the process of choosing a candidate for election, appointment, or honor
civic	of or relating to a citizen, a city, or citizenship budget	to determine in which ways a given amount of money can be spent policy	a course of action chosen in order to guide people in making decisions
ransom	to free from captivity or punishment by paying a price
paltry	trivial, worthless
tendency	a leaning toward a particular kind of thought or action
salary	money paid at regular times for work or services
suffrage	the right of voting

Sheet1

SENTENCE,C,80

He showed himself to have a particular @ for choosing the right word.
The surest @ to his ailment was a good meal and a solid night's rest.
His generosity knew no @, and he gave to any who were in need.
Thomas Jefferson easily won the @ for a second four-year term.
Coming up to vote for the first time, Thomas cast his @ into the box.
The bullet wound proved to be @, and the soldier did not recover.
The @ glasses made a beautiful ringing noise as they were clinked together.
He wrote the @ on the letter, stamped it, and put it in the mail.
In an impressing display of @, the police force dispersed the rioting mob.
In a raging fury, the mob wreaked @ wherever it went.
Any American who @ in those days was in quite a bit of danger.
It was no surprise to the nation that Thomas Jefferson won the @.
Voting is one of our @ duties.
Since he was not earning very much, Matthew had to @ his money carefully.
The new @ called for a release of all prisoners.
Sailors captured by the pirates were freed after a @ of $100 was paid for them.
Considering how much the land was worth, the price paid was a @ sum of money.
He was a kind man, but had the @ to lose his temper if provoked.
Jennifer liked her new job, and the @ was more than enough to live on.
Not all citizens had the right of @ when the United States was founded.