DOMARK SOFTWARE ADDS CURSE OF DRAGOR TO MAC LINE-UP

August 25, 1995, San Mateo, CA. -- Domark Software, Inc. announced today the upcoming release of its latest Macintosh CD-ROM title -- Curse of Dragor. The company, well known for its simulation products including Flying Nightmares, Out of the Sun and the forthcoming Absolute Zero, is now bringing its first adventure/role-playing game to the Macintosh with Curse of Dragor.

The scenario -- The bountiful land of Xorinth that was once living in a time of peace and balance -- until Dragor, the evil and powerful sorcerer, returns from exile stewing with anger and seething with revenge as a result of being banished by his good half-brother, King Meridian and his Hexaemeron council. Before Dragor succeeds in taking total control of the land the council succeeds in teleporting the citizens into neighboring lands and transforming themselves into various inanimate objects throughout the ancient castle. The frustrated Dragor then places a curse on the land and abandons it forever. Xorinth now awaits someone to discover its secrets and restore the once glorious domain.

As you explore the bowels of the castle, searching for the missing Hexaemeron council, giant ants, spiders and headless mummies cross your path as you collect clues and battle the evil that lurks behind every corner. Game features include over 15 characters, numerous levels, a variety of weapons at your disposal, high resolution 3D graphics, and acceleration for the Power Macintosh. "The Dragor release is a new move by Domark to expand its Mac product line into new gaming genres," commented Mike McGarvey, Domarks V.P. of Sales and Marketing.

Curse of Dragor will be distributed by Spectrum HoloByte in the North America for an SRP of $49.95. Further release information can be obtained by contacting Domark directly at (415) 513-8929 X110. For distribution details call Spectrum HoloByte at 1-800 729-4053.
