

Ambrosia Cafe the Tops

by "Cajun" David Richard

big surprise in our eMail box. that spends their time surfing the The Ambrosia Cafe as one of the Top Web site over the past 9 months, but have opened the Ambrosia Cafe, we visits. The topics covered by the very well-rounded info-spot for the a part in the success of the site. This award is not only for us, but is for everyone involved in the Ambrosia Cafe!

Andrew was so happy, he took us all out for ice cream (no, Hector didn't eat his).

oint was the first organization to rate Web sites, and have been doing it for many years. They are the only service on the Web that emphasizes quality, not quantity. This makes Point's list unique, and a good place to find links to quality sites.

Point's staff of reviewers surfs the Web daily looking for the best, smartest, and most entertaining sites around. If they review a page, it means they think it is among the best 5% of all Web sites in content, presentation, and/or experience. Some sites are tops in all three categories; others qualify due to fabulous content or exceptional presentation. And some make it in just because they're so deliciously silly.

Point makes no distinction between commercial, private, or student pages. Excellence is their only criterion.

n April 1st, Ambrosia received a very Point, a New York City based company Web (can you believe that?), chose 5% of all Web sites.

We have worked pretty hard on the we are not the only authors. Since we have seen a tremendous increase in authors in the Ambrosia Cafe create a Macintosh. Everyone in the Cafe has Macintosh. Everyone in the Cafe has

If you are interested in submitting a site that you feel is worth a look-see by the editors of point, simply submit your own review of the site at <http://www.pointcom.com/gifs/submit/>. Point's editors review all submissions, and they notify reviewed sites of their "Top 5%" status by eMail. Although they do review all submissions, they can't give personal replies to all submissions or offer specific timelines for when sites will be reviewed. Just so you know.
