Err:508

You can claim the equivalent-to-married amount if, at any time in 1992, you were single, widowed, separated and if, at that time, you supported and resided with a person related to you by blood, marriage or adoption under 18 when you provided support unless that person was your parent or grandparent or was mentally

Note:

- You cannot claim the equivalent-to-married amount for your common-law spouse or if you were married
- Neither you nor anyone else can claim another personal amount at line 304 or 305 for a person claimed
- Only one claim for the equivalent-to-married amount is allowed per household.
- A dependant who was away from home while attending school is considered to have resided with you if with you when not at school. In this case, provide the address where the dependant normally resides with

“Y” or “N”

Did you maintain the dwelling where the dependant resided?

No

Did you reside in the dwelling where the dependant resided?

n

You must answer “Yes” to both of the above questions to claim the equivalent-to-married amount
