How does it work?

After Quick Settings is launched, it adds a small icon  to the Taskbar. To always be able to access Quick Settings, you should leave the program in your StartUp Folder. If you move the mouse pointer on that icon, within a short time the program name will be displayed.

Click with the left mouse button on the icon to call pop up menu with links to Windows settings and properties (to elements of Control Panel) , Control Panel and System Information. You have to select an item you need in order to launch Windows settings.

Click with the right mouse button on the icon to display a more general context menu (About, Help, Readme.txt, Search WEB, Products, Quick Settings Web Site (enabled only after registration) and Exit).

Most menu items are links to elements of Control Panel. By selecting an item you will bring property dialog box of applet with the same name as the name of menu item. For instance:

By selecting Modem item in the main menu you will launch Modem properties Dialog Box and so on. By selecting menu item in the submenu you will load straight properties of applet with the same name as the name of submenu. For instance: By selecting Device Manager item under System submenu you will launch Device Manager of System applet of Control Panel and so on.

By selecting MS System Info item you will launch MS System Information program, which will supply you with extended information about all aspects and recourses of your computer. Program has to be installed on your computer in order to use it! On most computers it is already installed.

Selection of Control Panel item will bring Control Panel window.

Program can access up to 21 different Windows and program settings and 16 straight Windows properties. Quick Settings V1.01 checks, if settings available, and displays them. It is possible that on your computer you will see less then 21-menu items. Each menu item is the link to settings available to you. Some programs add own applets to Control Panel, which will not be accessible through main menu directly. You can always access them indirectly, by selecting Control Panel item each time you need preview or configure them. Since amount of applets in Control Panel is not limited and each new program can add own property to Control Panel, I use direct links only to most useful properties and settings and letting you access others indirectly trough Control Panel item of main menu. Otherwise main menu will be unmanageable and inconvenient for using, because of growing amount of not important properties of new programs. Quick Settings Web Site, Products Page, Search Web items are links to pages on the Internet. So by selecting one of them you will in most of cases launch default Internet Browser. You have to have access to the Internet in order to use that feature! It will work without problem if you already connected to Internet, but if your Internet browser was installed correctly, it will let you dial to the Internet by bringing "Connect to" Dialog box. So you can use this features for connection to Internet.
