Shareware authors have supplied product descriptions for each shareware application they offer. This catalog groups products so you can search for them by name or by subject matter. This catalog does not rate members' software for functionality or usefulness, nor can it attest to the usefulness of any product described here. That is for you -- the user -- to decide. Shareware can be tested on a "try before you buy" basis. If the software doesn't meet your needs, you won't have to worry about getting a refund. (That's the beauty of the shareware marketing concept.)

Test Drive 1,000 Games, Education, Business Tools and Utilities with ASP Advantage

DOS and Windows Shareware on CD-ROM

MUSKEGON, MI -- February 7, 1994 -- Whether your computing interests range from business and finance to education and games, or computers and religion, theres a new CD-ROM containing the latest, high-quality DOS and Windows Shareware programs that might meet your needs. The programs have passed the stringent quality and virus protection standards mandated by the Association of Shareware Professionals (ASP) and you can try them before you buy them.

The ASP Advantage CD-ROM, Second Edition, $24.95 (plus $2 shipping), contains approximately 1,000 programs that will do everything from balance your checkbook, compare home refinancing rates, print addresses onto labels, master elementary school math and spelling, or shoot aliens.

ASP Shareware programs are every bit as good as programs you can buy in a retail store. The only difference is the marketing method. With retail software, you have to buy it and then try it. With Shareware, you try it and if you like it, you buy it, said Eric Robichaud, chairman of the board of ASP. Satisfied users send payments directly to the software publisher and usually receive additional benefits, such as expanded documentation, free utilities, discounts on upgrades to future editions or complementary products and technical support. The cost of the disk covers only the manufacturing and distribution costs, not the purchase prices of the individual programs. Your payment supports the publishers, enabling them to continue writing newer and better Shareware programs.

Users can find programs by searching through categories, such as Business, Education, or Games. They can also type in keywords to find all products that might contain fonts, for example. They can then easily copy the programs to their hard drive to test the programs and see if the software meets their needs. If users like the program, they are required to send a registration fee to the publisher.

The CD-ROM is available from leading software stores or directly from ASP (616-788-5131) and will be updated quarterly with all new programs. To operate the disc, your computer should be running DOS 3.0 or greater, a hard drive, CD-ROM drive and any monitor.

This is a phenomenally good deal for users because they can try hundreds of programs for free. They dont even have to download the software from bulletin boards, or CompuServe, which could cost them a lot of money in the form of telephone charges and on-line service connect time, said Robichaud. All programs are ready to run. Unlike BBS versions of the software, which are compressed and must be opened with other programs. Many potential users are confused by that process. We make it very easy for every user to select and evaluate these programs.

A special version of the disc is available for BBS operators. It contains the files in compressed format, so their users can download the files faster than if the programs were not compressed.

ASP Shareware is available for programs in these categories: business, communications, education, engineering, finance, games (arcade, card, word, other), graphics, home hobby, mathematics, programming, philosophy and religion, utilities and writing.

All programs meet the ASP standards, which means that all programs are full, working versions, not demo or crippled versions; and that the publishers provide full documentation. All these assurances guarantee users will not become orphaned users, and will have support when they need it.

Founded in 1987, the ASP is the largest trade group of software publishers, with more than 1,700 members. The ASP grew at a 70 percent rate in the past 1 1/2 years, from 1,000 members. Sales of Shareware are estimated at $250,266,000 in 1992.

HOW TO CONTACT THE EDITOR

Do you have questions or comments about this Shareware Reference Guide? Contact editor Rob Rosenberger in any of the following ways:

CompuServe: 70007,4004 or GO CIS:ASPFORUM
InterNet: 70007.4004@compuserve.com
U.S. mail: P.O. Box 1115, O'Fallon, IL 62269
FAX: (618) 632-2339

SRG readers: you can always obtain the latest edition of this catalog and others from any of these locations:

CompuServe: search LIBrary 7 ("Finding Shareware") of the CIS:ASPFORUM forum for the file(s) you want to download.

EXEC-PC: search the "Mahoney" file collection for the file(s) you want to download.

GEnie: search library 12 of the HOSB RoundTable for the file(s) you want to download.

Shareware authors: you can list your own products in the Shareware Reference Guides with "CATAPP," the required submission software. It keeps a detailed database on all of your shareware -- you submit the database itself for inclusion. CATAPP costs nothing to use and you can list all of your shareware in the SRGs for free. Please obtain the latest version of the software from any of these locations:

CompuServe: download CATAPP.ZIP from LIBrary 7 (the "Finding Shareware" library) of the CIS:ASPFORUM forum.

EXEC-PC: (a free download) download CATAPP.ZIP from the "Free Utilities" file collection. Dial (414) 789-4210 for generic 2400 baud access; dial (414) 789-4360 for V.32 access; dial (414) 789-4352 for USR HST access.

GEnie: download CATAPP.ZIP from library 12 of the HOSB RoundTable.

AVAILABLE SHAREWARE REFERENCE GUIDES

The "#" in a filename denotes a three- or four-digit number which rises with each new monthly edition. You can find these files on many computer bulletin boards and on CompuServe & GEnie.

- SRGMN#.ZIP The primary Shareware Reference Guide (hypertext WinHelp format). Covers all known shareware from all shareware authors. A corresponding SRGUP#.ZIP covers new/updated shareware since the last monthly edition.
- SRGAS#.ZIP A subset (WinHelp format) covering all shareware offered by ASP member authors.
- SRGCS#.ZIP A subset (WinHelp format) covering all shareware offered on CompuServe by all authors.
- SRGSR#.ZIP A subset (WinHelp format) covering all shareware offered on CompuServe by all authors, which users can also register via CompuServe's "SWREG" shareware registration service.
- SRGDS#.ZIP A subset (WinHelp format) covering all DOS shareware offered by all authors.
- SRGGE#.ZIP A subset (WinHelp format) covering all shareware offered on GEnie by all authors.
- SRG9N#.ZIP A subset (WinHelp format) covering all Windows 95 and Windows NT shareware offered by all authors.
- SRGO2#.ZIP A subset (WinHelp format) covering all OS/2 shareware offered by all authors.
- SRGWN#.ZIP A subset (WinHelp format) covering all Windows shareware offered by all authors.
- SRGPL#.ZIP A subset (WinHelp format) covering all shareware offered by all authors, which users can register via the Public \(software\) Library.
- ASP#.ZIP The primary Shareware Reference Guide (ASCII format). Covers all known shareware from ASP member authors. A corresponding UPD#.ZIP covers new/updated shareware since the last monthly edition.
- CIS#.ZIP A subset (ASCII format) covering all shareware offered on CompuServe by ASP member authors. A corresponding CUPD#.ZIP covers new/updated shareware since the last monthly edition.
- GEN#.ZIP A subset (ASCII format) covering all shareware offered on GEnie by ASP member authors. A corresponding GUPD#.ZIP covers new/updated shareware since the last monthly edition.
- WIN#.ZIP A subset (ASCII format) covering Windows & WinNT & OS/2 shareware offered by ASP member authors. A corresponding WUPD#.ZIP covers new/updated shareware since the last monthly edition.

ABOUT THE EDITOR

ROB ROSENBERGER edits the official catalogs for the Association of Shareware Professionals (a.k.a. the Shareware Reference Guides) and serves as lead sysop for CompuServe's ASPFORUM forum. He previously served on the board of directors for the Association and owns a successful shareware company. Rosenberger's twelve years of programming experience include working for the NATO intelligence community and the U.S. Department of Defense. He first became professionally involved with IBM PC computers in 1984.

Rosenberger has authored three books and a video about shareware, and he has written on the subject for numerous magazines. He lectures around the country about the shareware concept and has consulted on books written by David D. Busch, Michael Callahan, and John C. Dvorak.

Rosenberger is also internationally recognized as an authority on the myths & hoaxes surrounding computer viruses and has consulted on books written by Janet Endrijonas, Pamela Kane, and Richard Levin. His credits include a critically acclaimed treatise on computer virus myths which has appeared in over 200 books & publications around the world in four different languages; and a historical timeline of the worldwide 1992 media hype about the Michelangelo virus, which appeared in ISPNews (a computer security industry newsletter).

HOW TO READ THE SHAREWARE REFERENCE GUIDES

You should have at least a basic understanding of how to use help files if you want to get the most out of this catalog. Please choose the "Help/How to use help" menu option if you need assistance with help files in general.

Every "SRG" (Shareware Reference Guide) contains a comprehensive listing of shareware products. The SRG groups shareware by subject matter and uses a concept known as hyperlinks to display text at the whim of the reader. If you see any text in green, it means you can click on it to see related text.

You can search for shareware in a number of different ways:

By category. Click on the "Contents" button, then click on the green text which says "Shareware product listings." This will produce a list of major categories including "Utilities," "Business," "Communications," and so on. Any of these major categories will produce a list of subcategories. You can continue to narrow your selection until you find shareware programs suitable to your needs. Click on the name of any shareware program to bring up a detailed listing for it.

By category title or key words. If you know the title of the category you want to look at, or if you know some key words about the type of product you want to find, you can click on the "Search" button to invoke a word search. Just start typing the name of the word(s) you want to search on -- the upper dialog box will try to find a match on what you typed. When the category you want to look at appears in the upper dialog box, double-click on it to bring up a list in the lower dialog box. At least one related topic will appear in the lower dialog box. Double-click on it to quickly bring up the category you want to read about. (Note: every category appears twice in the search list, once for its short title and once for its full title. You can look for phone dialer programs, for example, by searching on "Phone dialers" or "Utilities, Desktop utilities, Phone dialers.")

By product name. If you already know the name of the shareware product you want to read about, click on the "Search" button to invoke a word search. Just start typing the name of the product -- the upper dialog box will try to find a match on what you typed. When the product you want to read about appears in the upper dialog box, double-click on it to bring up a list in the lower dialog box of topics related to it. All shareware programs have at least two related topics: one to describe the product and one to identify the shareware author who wrote it. Double-click in the lower dialog box on the topic you want to read about.

By author name. If you already know the name of the author or company who wrote the shareware product you want to read about, click on the "Search" button to invoke a word search. Just start typing the name of the author/company -- the upper dialog box will try to find a match on what you typed. When the name appears in the upper dialog box, double-click on it to bring up a list in the lower dialog box of related topics. All shareware authors have at least two related topics: one to identify the author and one to describe the product(s) the author has published. Double-click in the lower dialog box on the topic you want to read about.

By new or updated product. If you just want to see descriptions of shareware updated since the last monthly edition, click on the "Contents" button, then click on the green text which says "New/updated product listings". You can now see all new & updated listings by clicking on the "<<" or ">>" browse buttons. Each time you click on a browse button, you will see the previous or next product updated since the last edition.

By not-so-new products. If you want to see shareware descriptions which have remained the same since the last edition, click on the "Contents" button, then click on the green which says "New/updated product listings", then click on the green text which says "Not-so-new product descriptions". You can now see all not-so-new product listings by clicking on the "<<" or ">>" browse buttons. Each time you click on a browse button, you will see the previous or next shareware product listing.

By special awards won. If you want to see shareware products with special awards to their credit, click on the "Search" button to invoke a word search. Start typing one of the following lines of text:

"Shareware Industry Award winners & nominees"

"PC Magazine/Ziff-Davis Interactive Shareware Award winners & nominees"

"PC Magazine Technical Excellence Award winners & nominees"

"Public Brand Software award winners"

and then double-click on it when it appears in the upper dialog box. This will bring up a list in the lower dialog box of any award-winning and -nominated products listed in this SRG. Double-click in the lower dialog box on the product you want to read about.

When you do a search of any sort, Windows remembers your last search criteria so you can quickly jump to related topics. Click on the "Search" button and press ENTER to pick up where you left off. If you want to start a new search, just click on the "Search" button and type a new search phrase.

The SRGs include two special browse buttons marked "<<" and ">>". These buttons act much like the pages of a book, letting you quickly see related topics in a sequential order. The SRGs use standard browse sequences you might expect in any help file, but they also have some special browse sequences:

One browse sequence lets you see every product category in sequential order. You could, for example, choose the "Utilities, Disk utilities" category and then use the browse keys to inspect every disk utility subcategory.

Another browse sequence lets you see all new or updated shareware product descriptions since the last edition came out. See above for details.

Another browse sequence lets you see all not-so-new shareware product descriptions. See above for details.

The "Back" button remembers your place when you go hopping around. You can return to any previous screen by clicking on the "Back" button enough times.

And of course, any green text displayed on the screen means you can click on it to see related text.

Some (but not all) SRGs identify disk vendors & bulletin boards approved by the Association of Shareware Professionals (ASP). Click on the "Contents" button anytime to see if this SRG has such listings. You can see approved disk vendors by state, and you can see approved BBSs by area code.

You can print anything in this help file when you see it on the screen. Best of all, you'll get the same professional-looking text when you send it to a printer. Press the "Print" button anytime to get a printout of the currently displayed information.

You can copy anything to the Windows clipboard when you see it on the screen. Press the "Clipbrd" button anytime to copy the currently displayed information. The clipboard doesn't always format text the way you see it on the screen, but you will get all the words -- and you can edit it if you wish before it goes into the clipboard.

As an SRG reader, you can get an introductory CompuServe membership. Call (800) 848-8199 and listen for instructions on how to join.

SRG readers in the United Kingdom should call 0800-289378. In Germany, call 0130-37-32. In the rest of Europe, call (+44) (272) 255111 or call (+49) (89) 66-550-111. If outside the U.S., Canada, and Europe, call U.S. 614-457-0802.

As an SRG reader, you can get an introductory GEnie membership. Call (800) 638-9636 and listen for instructions on how to join. (SRG readers outside the U.S. should call U.S. 301-340-6475.)

As an SRG reader, you can get an introductory EXEC-PC membership. Call (414) 789-4200 and ask for information on how to join. (SRG readers outside the U.S. should call U.S. 414-789-4200.)

Product: the name of the shareware program.

Version: the version number (and official release date) of the program.

Needs & recommendations: computer type [IBM PC, IBM 80386, Macintosh, etc.], operating system, and version number. May also describe other needed or optional hardware & software.

Unless noted otherwise, each program assumes you have a standard keyboard, monitor, printer, and either two floppy drives or a hard disk. And unless noted otherwise, programs written for the IBM PC assume you have at least 512k of total installed RAM. Some programs also need specific hardware or software such as:

- CD-ROM drive A device capable of reading CD-ROMs. A CD-ROM looks just like a regular compact disk with music on it, but it has information on it only a computer's CD-ROM drive can read.
- CGA monitor A video monitor capable of displaying CGA graphics. This includes most "laptop CGA" computers, plus higher resolution monitors such as the EGA or VGA. Some (but not all) of the described programs may operate correctly with a Hercules monitor if you use a "CGA simulator" program; consult your video monitor manual for details.
- Dual 720k disk drives At least two floppy drives capable of writing at least 720k of data per disk, or, preferably, a hard disk (see below).
- EGA monitor A video monitor capable of displaying EGA graphics. This almost always includes VGA and other higher-resolution monitors. CGA and Hercules monitors won't suffice.
- EMS memory Memory accessible via the Lotus-Intel-Microsoft Expanded Memory Specification. Not to be confused with expanded memory, extended memory, or XMS memory (see below). Windows, OS/2, and newer versions of DOS come with software designed to implement EMS memory on computers with enough installed memory.
- Epson printer A printer capable of recognizing the Epson print command set (an industry standard). Some printers, including some laser printers, have options to behave like an Epson printer. Some programs may require a specific model such as the Epson MX-80 or FX-100.
- Hard disk A fixed-, removable-, or network-drive device capable of storing multiple megabytes of data. Some programs also assume you have at least one floppy drive in addition to the hard disk.
- Hercules monitor A video monitor capable of displaying Hercules graphics. CGA, EGA, VGA, & SVGA monitors won't suffice.
- HP DeskJet A Hewlett-Packard DeskJet or compatible printer. Some programs may require a DeskJet starting with a specific model such as the DeskJet Plus or having a specific feature like a RAM cartridge.
- HP LaserJet A Hewlett-Packard LaserJet or compatible printer. (HP DeskJet printers recognize most, but not all, of the HP LaserJet command set.) Some programs may require a specific model such as the LaserJet II or with a specific feature like the LaserJet IIISi.
- Math coprocessor An IBM PC or compatible computer with an installed math coprocessor unit. Commonly referred to as an "80x87 chip," these include the 8087, 80287, and 80387 coprocessors. (80486- and Pentium-based computers have math coprocessors by default.) Most 8086-, 80286-, and 80386-based IBM PCs & compatibles have no installed math coprocessor by default. (80286- and 80386-based computers can accept a math coprocessor if you purchase one.)
- Modem A modem. Almost all programs work with a "Hayes compatible" modem, specifically one able to recognize the Hayes command set (an industry standard). A few programs claim to work with non-Hayes modems too. Some programs may require the modem to operate at a specific rate of speed (e.g. "1200 baud").
- Mouse A Logitech- or Microsoft-compatible mouse.
- Network A computer hooked up a local area network (LAN). Program descriptions will

- normally specify the different types of LAN systems under which they can operate.
- Plotter A plotter output device. Many of the described programs need a plotter able to recognize the HPGL (Hewlett Packard Graphics Language) command set.
- PostScript printer A printer able to interpret the PostScript® command set. Many printers (including the HP LaserJet series) offer PostScript compatibility via plug-in cartridges. Software also exists to emulate PostScript on hundreds of popular printers.
- SVGA monitor A video monitor capable of displaying SVGA graphics. This almost always includes higher-resolution monitors. CGA, EGA, VGA, and Hercules monitors won't suffice.
- Streaming tape device A device capable of reading streaming tapes. Also referred to as a "tape backup device." Streaming tapes look something like a standard music cassette or videocassette, but it holds information only a computer can read. Common streaming tapes include DC600, DC2000, DC2120; tape storage formats include QIC-40 and QIC-80.
- VGA monitor A video monitor capable of displaying VGA graphics. This almost always includes higher-resolution monitors. CGA, EGA, and Hercules monitors won't suffice.
- XMS memory Memory accessible via the Lotus-Intel-Microsoft eXtended Memory Specification. Not to be confused with expanded memory, extended memory, or EMS memory (see above). Windows, OS/2, and newer versions of DOS come with software designed to implement XMS memory on computers with enough installed memory.

Author: the name of the person or company offering this product. Click on the name to see an address, telephone numbers, and what credit cards (if any) they can accept for payment.

Registration: the cost of a single-user license expressed in U.S. currency unless otherwise noted. Many authors provide "multi-tier" registrations, and you may pay a little more or less than the amount stated here depending on your situation. (You can sometimes save money by "reading the fine print.") Many authors offer network, site, and corporate licenses for an added price; please contact the author for specific details and price quotes.

PsL#: you can register this product via the Public (software) Library, and you can pay for it with your MasterCard, Visa, American Express, Optima, or Discover card. Call (800) 242-4775, have your credit card handy, and have the product's PsL registration number handy. (Overseas customers should call U.S. 713-524-6394.) Or if you want to fax your shareware purchase order to PsL, fax it to (713) 524-6398.

SWREG#: applies only to CompuServe users. You can register this product on CompuServe and have the cost added to your service bill. This method of payment proves especially useful for:

1. overseas users who don't have a credit card accepted by the author;
2. business customers who find it easier to register shareware by tacking the fee onto a corporate-sponsored CompuServe account.

CompuServe users should GO CIS:SWREG for more details.

Registration benefits: Describes what you get for registering the shareware. Many authors provide a printed manual, a master disk, a year of unlimited phone support, source code, etc. The product description mentions what you will receive.

ASP member shareware products come with certain minimum benefits when you register. The author must acknowledge your registration (you don't just get a canceled check) and must provide a minimum amount of technical support for at least three months. In addition, every ASP member can offer the following benefits to registered customers:

CompuServe IntroPak get an introductory membership to the CompuServe network with a $15 usage credit when you register an ASP member's shareware product.

Many ASP members include this information when they acknowledge your registration. Contact the author if you need further details or assistance.

Some authors add "registration reminder screens" to the shareware program as a way to gently remind people to register if they find the product useful. Most authors will either send a copy of the program without the reminder screens when you register, or tell you of a way to disable those reminder screens. Please contact the author if you need further details or assistance.

Download: helps you locate a downloadable shareware copy of this product so you can give it a try. CompuServe & GEnie information, when supplied, tells exactly where you can find the file(s) for download on those services. BBS users receive general information on what file(s) to look for on a local BBS, and in some cases it includes a BBS phone number you can call to download the software.

Download size: the size of the file(s) to download, in kilobytes. A 2400 baud modem can download about 14,000 bytes per minute under normal conditions. A 9600 baud modem can download about 60,000 bytes per minute under normal conditions.

Special instructions: tells if the author limits product distribution to the United States. In some cases the author or company may have signed a contract forbidding worldwide shareware distribution. In other cases the product may only appeal to an American audience (income tax software for example). In rare cases, U.S. federal laws may actually prohibit the author or company from distributing the product in other countries.

Awards & nominations: lists certain industry awards the program has to its credit. In some cases it may have only received nomination as a finalist; in other cases the program may have gone on to win the named award.

Editor's note: the editor may append text of his own if something needs further explanation.

Description: a paragraph or two describing the shareware product in detail. This information comes direct from the author or company behind the program.

This program is produced by a member of the Association of Shareware Professionals (ASP). ASP wants to make sure that the shareware principle works for you. If you are unable to resolve a shareware-related problem with an ASP member by contacting the member directly, ASP may be able to help. The ASP Ombudsman can help you resolve a dispute or problem with an ASP member, but does not provide technical support for members' products. Please write to the ASP Ombudsman at 545 Grover Road, Muskegon, MI 49442 or send a CompuServe message via CompuServe Mail to ASP Ombudsman 70007,3536. The Ombudsman may be contacted by FAX by sending to the ASP FAX number: (616) 788-2765. In communication with the Ombudsman please include a telephone number and/or FAX if available.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I obviously have to thank ASP's then-chairman Jim Button for believing in the original catalog concept when I started it in the summer of 1988. At least three other ASP members had failed to launch one and some people on the board of directors didn't think I had a chance.

Bob Ostrander, another previous ASP board member, deserves a lot of credit (and I do mean a lot) for keeping me from shelving this project due to a devastating setback. He made me feel very important whenever I needed to throw a temper tantrum.

Plus a special note of thanks to Brian Moran at Microsoft. My plans for a Windows hypertext catalog would have gone nowhere without his help. Moran helped me over a lot of hurdles. Microsoft clearly respects the shareware community and wants to see it flourish. (Note to Bill Gates: give Brian a raise.)

Products used to create this file: Borland Turbo Pascal compiler, multiple TurboPower Software programming toolkits, Microsoft Word for Windows, Microsoft's HCP help compiler, and JP Software's 4DOS command processor. George Abbott from the ASP provides updated vendor/BBS information each month.

ROB ROSENBERGER

WHAT THE CRITICS SAY

"Provides a wealth of information about shareware and shareware products. The SRG is a must-have for anyone interested in shareware... The very best shareware resource I've seen!"

-- Michael E. Callahan, Editor-In-Chief, Shareware Magazine, 1/94

FOREWORD

There was a time when copying computer software disks was forbidden. You couldn't even make a backup copy of the programs you purchased. It was the era of copy-protected disks. You may not remember this dark period of computer history (perhaps you weren't yet a computer user). But many of us "old timers" remember those days all too clearly. It was a period of software tyranny. And the software user was the software "loser."

Although the idea of sharing disks seems commonplace now, in those days the idea was revolutionary. Shareware was the antithesis of copy protection. Trusting people to voluntarily purchase software after trying it out was an incredible, radical strategy which few people thought would succeed.

But the revolution did succeed. Leading the charge were shareware authors, computer clubs, BBS sysops, user groups, shareware disk vendors, and software buyers. As one of the pioneers of shareware, I was blessed to witness the battle revolutionary from the front lines.

In those early days, many programmers caught the vision of what shareware was all about and were eager to bring their own products to the shareware market. These were fun times, because we were all experimenting with different approaches to see what worked best.

What price should I charge for my program? What incentives should I provide to those who send in a payment? What should I withhold? How does one advertise a shareware disk? How do I do press releases, and to whom should I send them? These questions, and many others, dominated the lives of budding shareware authors.

I always regretted that I didn't have time to personally correspond with every potential shareware author who approached me with questions. There was definitely a need for some kind of coordination or information exchange.

In 1986 I was contacted by several other shareware leaders to attend a meeting in Dallas. I leaped at the opportunity. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss the possibility of a coordinated approach to shareware. I viewed this as an opportunity to help provide information and assistance to thousands of potential shareware programmers.

The outcome of the conference was an agreement to form a shareware association. The ASP was born.

With a solid core of enthusiastic, creative volunteers, we prospered as an organization. On his own time, Rob Rosenberger created a comprehensive listing of the shareware programs offered by our members. What started as an independent project was received enthusiastically by the other members and soon grew into a valuable resource.

This catalog represents the cream of the crop the very best programs the shareware industry has produced. As a shareware user, it is the first place I look when I need another computer program. As a shareware author, the catalog is important to me because of its huge potential to inform others about the shareware I personally offer. It is one of the most valuable and important lists of quality software.

INTRODUCTION

When Americans go looking for a new car, they expect to kick the tires and take the latest model out for a spin. Yet they'll buy software right off the shelf without testing it first. Wouldn't you like to try software before paying for it?

Let's dream for a moment. We want to take home fully functional software and try it out. We don't want a salesman hanging over our shoulder. We want to see how easy it is to use the program. We want to read the documentation. We want to be trusted to pay for software if (repeat if) we continue to use it. If it doesn't meet our needs, we want to discard it and go on to another program.

Enough dreaming. Believe it or not, you actually can test-drive some software just like a car. It has to do with a concept known as shareware. You may have seen this word mentioned in computer magazines and newspaper articles. It may be a mystery to you now but you'll know a lot more after reading this.

And you'll have a whole new outlook when you buy software.

...First off, let's get something straight: shareware is commercial software. The people behind these programs hope to earn money just as if their products sat on store shelves. The shareware concept is simply another way to market programs, so we'll use the word retail to describe software sold at computer stores.

Shareware means "try before you buy" software. You usually get 30 days to test-drive a program before you have to pay for it. No salesman hangs over your shoulder. Documentation comes in text files included with the application.

Shareware advertising comes largely by "word of disk," much like word of mouth. As part of their software copyright, shareware authors encourage you to give copies to others for evaluation purposes. You help advertise a program whenever you pass it along to friends and colleagues.

You must pay for shareware only if you keep using it after the trial period. If it doesn't meet your needs, just discard it and try another product. It's that simple.

You register a shareware program by sending a payment to the author. Some say you pay a "license" to continue using the software, but it's basically the same thing.

BENEFITS FOR YOU

You usually get added benefits when you register. Most registrations come with telephone, fax, and/or computer bulletin board support, and some authors send professionally printed manuals. The documentation files included with the program describe all the benefits you get for registering.

Many (but not all) shareware authors offer free upgrades with a registration. It's like getting a new car just by trading in last year's model. A few authors let you use all future versions of their programs. Most others set a limit on how many times you can upgrade for free.

It's not common, but some shareware authors pay commissions to registered users who get others to register. The pros and cons of this incentive make it a controversial issue in the shareware industry. Feel free to form your own opinion about it.

Some shareware authors confidently offer a money back guarantee on their software. They will refund your registration fee, no questions asked, if you return everything in good condition within 30 days (some give you as much as 90 days).

A few authors supply the program's source code when you register. Others offer custom programming options in lieu of releasing the source code. Not all authors provide these benefits, and you'll probably have to pay extra to receive them, but it can be a blessing if you desperately need a customized application.

BENEFITS FOR AUTHORS

As we've seen, shareware has enormous benefits for users. But what are the benefits for authors? Why would they go the shareware route?

Authors like it because it doesn't come with all the headaches of a retail software company. They can keep a "regular" job and work on shareware products in their spare time. They don't have to be overly concerned with marketing, packaging, and advertising. A good shareware program tends to market itself (with a little help).

Shareware is an inexpensive way to start a software business. Many authors operate out of their homes instead of an expensive office building. They don't have to pay for all the office space, marketing, and packaging a retail company needs.

All of these savings can be passed on to users in the form of lower registration fees. An inexpensive product gives authors an edge against retail software. (So then, reducing overhead costs benefits the user as well as the author.)

Many authors "give birth" to their programs and don't appreciate people forcing them to raise their "babies" a certain way. It may be hard to understand this if you aren't a programmer, but it's very true. Retaining complete control over their work is a powerful incentive when deciding to release programs under the shareware concept.

Authors know a shareware product will live or die based on its value. After all, who would choose mediocre software if they could find something better? The shareware concept lets authors demonstrate their own faith in a program.

HOW GOOD IS SHAREWARE?

Shareware products must be good if they hope to compete against retail programs. After all, you could just walk into a computer store and walk out with software. Successful shareware programs tend to have one or more of the following qualities:

- A little more powerful, yet hundreds of dollars cheaper
- Caters to the expert while others cater to the novice (or vice versa)
- Offers a radical new approach to the solution
- Has no retail competitors

These authors go to great lengths to attract customers in a nation which prefers to shop at stores, and yet there are many detractors of shareware. Some computer store owners fear a loss of retail sales, for example. Others denounce shareware after failing to make money from it. Perhaps they tried to sell a mediocre program, or maybe the market had already been saturated with similar products. For whatever reason, some people harbor ill feelings toward shareware and they make sure everyone knows it.

Let's dispel some of the misconceptions about shareware:

"Shareware is second-rate software."

Yes, plenty of trashy shareware exists, but there's also a lot of trashy stuff sitting on store shelves. You lose money if you buy poor retail software. What do you lose if you discard bad shareware?

"Shareware authors just weren't successful enough to make it in the retail business."

ButtonWare first made it onto the SoftLetter 100 list in 1987, beating out hundreds of retail companies. Over two dozen companies report $1 million or more in shareware sales each year. Dozens more report yearly sales above $100,000, and dozens more are self-employed. Many accept credit cards and some even provide tollfree support lines. Success stories abound in the shareware industry if you have a good product.

"You can't rely on shareware authors to support their products."

Magee Enterprises, like many shareware companies, offers support even to non-registered users. (We call them "potential customers" in the shareware industry.) Shareware authors can, and do, provide support over the phone, by fax, on computer bulletin boards, on national bulletin board networks, via national information services like CompuServe & GENie... Some even list a home phone number in case you need support during evening hours.

"Retail software is more 'user friendly.'"

Shareware authors were among the first to offer popup windows, pulldown menus, context-sensitive help, custom programming, fast updates, and much more. Large companies often experience delays in trying to upgrade software because they get bogged down by bureaucracies, advertising priorities, and overhead costs.

"Shareware hasn't won any awards for being great."

ButtonWare's PC-File program was the champion of a 1988 Consumer Reports reader survey as a write-in candidate. Procomm captured its first InfoWorld Readers Choice award back in 1986. 4DOS was a finalist in the PC Magazine Technical Excellence Awards for 1989. Programs such as Newkey, Flu_Shot+, and InstaCalc have been named Editor's Choice in computer magazines throughout the years. Magna Software was #151 in Inc. magazine's 1988 list of America's fastest growing private companies. These accolades continue up through 1994 and beyond....

"Shareware is cheap because you get what you pay for."

Shareware usually doesn't pay the salaries of lawyers, advertising agents, or the store clerks who ring up your purchase. You don't pay for a colorful box designed to catch your eye while it sits on the shelf. These savings can be passed on to you in the form of lower registration fees.

"Shareware spreads most of the computer viruses out there."

This is a popular statement with the non-computer mainstream press. Some of the "Chicken Little" books about viruses make this same claim despite overwhelming empirical evidence to the contrary. Unfortunately, these same people don't mention the dozens of companies which have transmitted tens of thousands of infections via retail software sold off the shelf in its original shrinkwrap. An entire chapter of this file devotes itself to the subject of shareware and viruses.

THE ASP

The Association of Shareware Professionals (ASP) formed in 1987 to strengthen the future of shareware as an alternative to traditional retail software marketing. ASP also serves as an information clearinghouse for its members and the public at large. Its members subscribe to a code of ethics and are committed to the shareware concept.

The ASP demands professionalism from its members. Authors must acknowledge every registration (you get more than just a canceled check) and they must provide at least three months of support for their products. ASP members must also live up to any other benefits they offer.

You can turn to an ombudsman for help if you can't resolve a problem with an ASP member. Members must explain this in every shareware program, disk vendor catalog, or bulletin board service they offer. Even the Shareware Reference Guides carry the ASP ombudsman statement.

Few people need the ombudsman's help. ASP members represent the cream of the crop in the shareware industry, but it's nice to know you can turn to someone if you think you got a raw deal.

The term "shareware" is not trademarked, so authors can call software by that name even if it really fails to be "try before you buy." ASP authors have agreed to follow a set of guidelines, assuring you that any shareware program from an ASP member truly will let you "kick all the tires." All features in the registered version must be fully documented in the shareware version. ASP members' shareware programs may have tastefully, infrequent registration reminders but they won't nag you with long delays or frequent popups.

The Association monitors Congress for potentially damaging legislation and has sent spokesmen to testify before congressional committees. It has also taken on the responsibility of safeguarding the term "shareware" itself. ASP has filed motions in countries as far away as England and South Africa to stop people who attempt to claim it as a trademark word.

ASP members "meet" online in a public forum of the CompuServe network (GO CIS:SHAREWARE). Members send & receive messages, transmit files, and exchange valuable information. Old hands in the shareware business pass along their insights to new members. The group holds public and private debates and members vote on major issues by sending private messages to the Association secretary.

The ASP holds yearly "face to face" meetings and appears at various trade shows around the country (including COMDEX and PC EXPO). It also provides speakers who lecture on every aspect of shareware. You can learn more by writing to the Association of Shareware Professionals, 545 Grover Road, Muskegon, MI 49442. If you have a modem and a CompuServe account, you can log on and go to the CIS:SHAREWARE forum for more information.

SHAREWARE & VIRUSES

"Shareware is as safe as [retail] software if obtained directly from an author or from a vendor or BBS who has gotten the disk directly from the author."

-- an official ASP statement on shareware

We've all heard about computer viruses designed to confuse you or to destroy data files. A virus is a malicious programming technique known as a "Trojan horse." What makes a virus unique is its capability to infect other software with a copy of itself. It travels silently from program to program, from computer to computer, and thus can cause more widespread grief.

If you give someone a copy of a program, you might give them a virus with it. Shareware theoretically increases the chance of spreading them around. (We're sharing programs, right?)

Shareware gets a bum rap. Pick up any major newspaper or magazine story and you'll see experts mentioning an epidemic of viruses in shareware programs. "Use only retail software," they warn. Many companies and federal agencies take this advice and ban shareware, ignoring the fact at least 52 companies have spread viruses in tens of thousands of copies of shrinkwrapped retail packages.

Many stores today accept returns on opened packages, presenting the threat of viruses in re-shrinkwrapped software. Egghead once offered $750 to a man infected after store employees put a returned product back on the shelf. Egghead has since "clarified" its software return policies, but they don't have a monopoly on software sales -- and virus expert Wolfgang Stiller claims store managers typically ignore such policies.

COMDEX and PC EXPO trade shows have problems with viruses spread by people manning company booths. Microcom, then the firm behind the popular Virex-PC software, scored a marketing coup in 1991 when it sent employees to inspect computers at PC EXPO at no charge. They wound up cleansing dozens of infected systems and sold numerous antivirus packages. Microcom vice president Robert Capon says this incident parallels his experiences at every major convention since 1988: "we've bailed out more companies attending trade shows than you could imagine."

Compare this to the shareware industry's record of spreading viruses. 1990 saw shareware's first recorded case of infected master disks. The author shipped four infected floppies; all four recipients detected it on their own and returned or destroyed them. This occurred fully two years after the first of many similar events involving retail master disks.

Why does shareware have such a fantastic track record compared to the retail industry? The answer lies in bulletin boards and disk vendors, the two major distribution channels for shareware today. Most people who obtain programs this way constantly look over their shoulders, reducing the chance a virus will get into the system.

Disk vendors serve as a clearinghouse for good shareware. They usually get programs direct from the authors and scan for viruses before offering it to customers. Retail stores can't check the disks they sell without breaking a shrinkwrap seal in the process.

Bulletin board operators, known as "sysops," have dealt successfully with the threat of malicious software for over a decade. Even so, most BBS users double-check the sysop by running virus detection programs on every piece of software they download.

Virus expert Rich Levin has watched the shareware industry since the early 1980s and claims "people who use bulletin boards and shareware usually practice better virus safety measures." Indeed, in 1987 the BBS community received the first IBM PC software written specifically to stop infections -- at a time when Peter Norton still dismissed viruses as an "urban legend." (Norton now markets antivirus software.)

The next time you go to a computer store, remember this: most of the antivirus packages they sell either started out as shareware or use techniques developed by and for the BBS community. Microcom, for example, proudly noted how its Virex-PC program came from the mind of a shareware author.

WHY THE BUM RAP?

If we have so many horror stories in retail software and so few in shareware, why then does shareware get a bum rap?

It seems so plausible. You can get a virus if you share software. Shareware thrives on people who share software. Bulletin boards carry a lot of shareware. Therefore people assume they account for a large number of infections.

Experts label their assumptions as fact. Reporters talk to computer security consultants to get the information (and quotes) they need for a story, yet a survey by Empirical Research Systems indicates almost half of these experts formed their opinions just by reading newspapers. This means the non-computer press literally feeds consultants information, which they regurgitate for other reporters who write more stories, which other consultants read... This same poll concluded by estimating only 1/3 of computer security experts have an adequate knowledge of the virus threat.

Retail stores tell it to customers. Software stores make money from retail software. If a customer expresses concerns about paying so much for a retail program, a store employee can shrug his shoulders, point to any number of experts, and say "we don't sell viruses." And the customer will believe it.

People must conquer their irrational fears before they can confront the real virus threat. Ignorance thrives on hysteria, and hysteria has blamed shareware for spreading the majority of viruses.

Product: Rosenthal WinLite

Version: 1.0 (10-24-93)

Author: Rosenthal Engineering (Doren Rosenthal)

ASP member: Yes

Description:

Compress MS-Windows programs to dramatically reduce their size. Programs compressed are functionally identical to the originals, only smaller. For example, consider the 180k "Solitaire" game that is bundled with MS-Windows 3.1. You can compress it to less than 77k, or 43% of its original size. The smaller, more efficient programs save disk space, LAN overhead, disk caching resources and discourage reverse engineering.

Product: Windows Disassembler

Version: 1.8 (10-01-93)

Author: Eric Grass and Todd T. Snoddy

Description:

Can generate MASM 6 compatible assembly language source code for 16 bit Windows EXE and DLL files. It also comes with an assembly language source processor that analyzes the assembler code generated by the disassembler and converts it into a more understandable high level format. Can be used to increase your understanding of how a Windows program actually operates, as well as make it easier to patch code that you don't have the source for.

Product: wFListen

Version: 3.31 (11-05-95)

Author: Prodigy Computing

ASP member: Yes

Description:

For fax-modem owners who use WinFax Pro from Delrina, and who also use a DOS- or Windows-based comms program. It disables and re-enables WinFax auto receive (AR). This is useful with comms programs because they require you to disable AR while they are running, and it's easy to forget to switch AR back on. Will silently disable AR, launch your comms program, wait for it to finish, and then re-enable AR. Optional installable languages: French and German.

Needs: IBM AT (80286), Windows 3.1 or better. Modem. WinFax Pro (version 2 or 3) or WinFax Lite.

Recommended: Mouse.

Description:

A little added feature for WinFax Pro users. It's easy to leave WinFax with auto-receive switched off accidentally. Solves the problem by changing the WinFax icon. This way, you can see whether WinFax has auto-receive on or off, even when WinFax is iconized. You can even customize the icons. Works only on the in-memory copy of WinFax: does not patch your Delrina executable files.

Version: 1.1 (11-01-94)

Author: KMR Consulting (Kenneth A. Reek)

ASP member: Yes

Description:

Keeps track of the time you've spent on your computer. Time is charged to one or more "projects" of your choosing by "punching in" when you begin work. In addition, projects may be grouped in different categories, such as business and pleasure. Usage can then be summarized by project and category, giving total hours and percentage of use for each project and category. This is the information you need to justify a deduction for business use of your computer.

Version: 6.0 (01-09-96)

Author: DynoTech Software (David Carlson)

ASP member: Yes

Description:

Eliminate colored crates from the playing area by maneuvering and dropping boxes on them. Unlike many games, instead of succumbing to increasing speed (since you don't have the reflexes of an android), you eventually might solve all levels [10 Shareware; 150 Champion Edition]. If you are interested in a game more challenging to your neural transmitters than punishing to your carpal tunnels, this is the game for you. But, watch out for falling stones, bombs, and the dreaded anti-gravity boxes.

Helps families stay organized and aware of each other's activities and events. It merges the schedules of household members to create shared or individual calendars that cover everyone, one person, or some of the family. Calendars can be for a day, a week, or a user defined period. Browse them on screen or print them out. Schedule repeating events with one entry, even those that occur irregularly. Schedule several people at once. Automatically checks for conflicts with schedules and special days.
