

ABOUT DIGITAL STOCK™

Digital Stock Corporation is the leading provider of high quality royalty-free stock photography on CD ROM for the advertising, graphic design, prepress, multimedia, and publishing industries. We offer all the quality and variety you expect from the best stock agencies, combined with unbeatable value and convenience.

Each Digital Stock disc contains 100 superb, professional photographs relating to a specific subject category. The images may be used, royalty-free, in print and multimedia applications and web sites. A color contact sheet is included with each disc showing all 100 photographs on the disc, so you can find the right image quickly and easily. All discs are Macintosh, PC, and Unix compatible.

Our images are scanned on a state-of-the-art drum scanner, and stored on disc in various resolutions up to 32MB. Every image will produce stunning, full page or larger CMYK separations at 150 lines per inch. And our free color management software, developed jointly by Eastman Kodak and Digital Stock, automatically guarantees accurate color in any application, from multimedia to four color separations.

COLOR MANAGEMENT

Color management is a crucial issue when working with images on your computer. You want the colors to be accurate whether you are viewing the image in RGB on your monitor or CMYK in print. Digital Stock Corporation is the only image provider that brings you professional color management software that guarantees color fidelity. The software, provided free of charge on our Catalog Disc, works automatically with image editing programs like Photoshop and page layout programs like PageMaker. By using this software to open your images you can achieve great color no matter where your images will appear – on a dye-sub print, on a computer monitor, or on a four color press.

The Kodak Color Management System (KCMS) has become the standard of color management systems and is built into many image editing and page layout programs. We feel so strongly about using color management that we had Kodak's top color science engineers develop a custom "Digital Stock Drum Scan" source profile for use exclusively with our discs. Additionally, we have licensed many of Kodak's most valuable destination profiles. Both our custom source profile and the standard destination profiles are included on our Catalog Disc and provided to you free of charge. Using these profiles gives you a perfect color match between the image "source" (our Crosfield scanner) and the intended press, printer, or monitor "destination."

Apple's ColorSync and Microsoft's Windows 95 are the first implementations of the new ICC color management format, which is expected to become a universal standard. All of the profiles we provide in KCMS format are also provided in ICC format on our Catalog Disc.

To give you an idea of how color management works and how useful it is, consider the following two examples. When opening one of our images, you specify that the image source is the Digital Stock Drum Scan and the output destination is CMYK separations for coated paper stock. This image will open with CMYK tonal values perfect for printing on coated paper. Another example would be if your images were going to be used in a presentation on a monitor. You would again open using "Digital Stock Drum Scanner" as the source and this time use monitor RGB as the destination. The images will contain RGB tonal values that are perfect for that use. No other image provider gives you this flexibility.
