When you click the Add Perspective command, CorelDRAW places a red grid box over the selected object. This box has a black square at each of its four corners. The black squares are handles that let you adjust the shape of the grid box. The red grid lines help you get a sense of the effect you're creating.

You'll also notice that the Shape tool is selected. You use this tool to edit the object's perspective.