

If you plan to print your work on a commercial printing press, then you'll need to send your work to a service bureau. The service bureau will image your work onto film which is then used to create printing plates. A print shop will use the printing plates to produce your final output.

One way of sending your work to a service bureau is to print your work to a .PRN file and then send the file to the service bureau.

This Tutor will take you through the process of printing your work to file for a service bureau.
