New search engine improves navigation and gives quicker results.

Our new features help you find images faster by letting you use keywords in a Boolean or natural language environment. Adding “and,” “not” or “or” can cut search results down to size.

Keyword links spark new ideas.

Click a thumbnail image and see keyword links to similar images. Or click on the photographer’s name to see more images by that photographer.

Preview all the images on any disc before you buy.

Once you’re in “Image Collection,” simply choose “Online PDF Catalogs” under “Useful Info,” and then choose the CD you want to see.

Lightbox catalogs let you collect your images and review your selections with others.

Take your favorite images found from your search and place them in an online Lightbox album. Then you, your clients and colleagues can view and modify your image selection together. Or call our research consultants and they’ll put a Lightbox album together for you, free of charge.

How to search our CD-ROM products

In order to get the most comprehensive search results, please use the Image Finder™ CD. If you don't have the Image Finder CD, you can order a free copy from your local PhotoDisc office.

The Portfolio browser on your CD can function for both basic searches and more refined searches.

Searching using the Keywords Palette

The Keywords Palette can be found in the floating dialog box on the Macintosh® and on the left side of the Image Finder catalog on the PC.

The Keywords Palette is a cumulative list of all the keywords related to every image in a catalog. For example: if you enter the word "dog" in the entry field and click Find, it will automatically find all the images of "dog" in the collection.

Searching using the Find field

To bring up the Find dialog box please do the following:

1. Click Catalog at the top of the screen.
2. Click Find. This will bring up the Find entry field for keyword searching.

Features of the Find function

Using the Find field, you can perform individual image number searches, Boolean searches and product searches. To search by image number you can either enter the number in the Keyword field followed by ".JPG" or change the field name to File Name and enter the image number (e.g., 1001.JPG). You can enter multiple image numbers by selecting More Choices, which will allow you to enter several keywords. Boolean operations can be performed in the Find dialog box. You can search by product by entering the product code in the Keyword field. For example, if you want to search for Signature Series 18, enter "SS18", and all 100 images from the CD will come up in the browser.

Each image in PhotoDisc's collection is searchable by its assigned keywords. These words describe the image as accurately and comprehensively as possible in four different ways: (1) the subject matter of the image, (2) the concept(s) behind the image, (3) the general technical characteristics of the image, and (4) the photographer's name. To fully maximize the potential of keyword searching, it's important to understand each type of keyword and how the keywords are assigned.

(1) Subject keywords:

- Nouns that identify the subject(s) of the image, e.g., car, telephone, sky, windmill, scissors. These keywords are always in the singular form, with the following exceptions: people, businessmen, businesswomen, businesspeople, men, women and children.
- Adjectives, e.g., old fashioned, cloudy, industrial.
- Words that denote action(s) in the image. These are always in the gerund form, e.g., running, eating, talking.
- Approximate age levels of people in the images: baby, toddler, child (or children), teen, young adult, adult, mature and elderly. Any image with a person or people in it will have at least one of these keywords.
- Ethnicity and/or nationality of the people in the images, if known, e.g., asian, native american, australian. Multiethnic is used for groups of people.
- Titles of discs.
- Time periods, e.g., vintage, retro, 1960s.

Note: The keyword field is not case-sensitive; in other words, it doesn't matter whether you type capital letters or lowercase letters.

(2) Concepts

A concept is an idea or a notion (always in noun form) that captures the essence or underlying message of an image. Examples include communication, success, challenge and teamwork. Many images are assigned more than one concept.

(3) Technical keywords

- horizontal, vertical or square (image orientation)
- exterior or interior
- color, bw or sepia
- background
- left, right or center (subject orientation)
- blue, green, red, yellow, purple, orange, brown, black, white, gray, pink, tan, beige, gold, silver, multicolor (main colors in image)
- still life, closeup, long shot, detail, overhead, below, aerial, underwater, blur, soft focus
- object (clipped image)

Contacting PhotoDisc

A clipping path is an outline around an object that allows you to mask the object and separate it from its background. This special feature is useful for dropping images onto white space or onto a background image. All Object Series images have a custom path embedded into all file sizes and can be accessed by opening the image in Adobe® Photoshop®. A clipping path will render the smoothest possible edge around your object, constrained only by the resolution of your output device. For example, a masked object sent to a 3600dpi imagesetter will have a more cleanly defined edge than it would printed on a 600dpi laser printer. Within the Clipping Paths submenu, we have left the flatness setting blank for each object. The flatness option allows you to specify how smooth the outline will be rendered when being processed for output. The lower the value, the smoother the edge of the outlined image. A flatness setting of zero instructs the output device to render the smoothest path possible. However, in complex documents a zero setting may cause PostScript® errors on your output device. If the setting is left blank, the output device will default to the smoothest possible setting for that device. Typically, a flatness setting of 3 to 5 is adequate. Most images can be set to a flatness of 5 to 8 without visible degradation of edge quality. You may also use the supplied path to create drop shadows and glow effects behind your image. These techniques are explained in depth in many third-party Photoshop books. We hope the supplied paths will save you many hours of tedious work and increase your creative options when using PhotoDisc objects.

PhotoDisc JPEG-compresses all its images. We compress images on the highest setting, which ensures the highest-quality image.

Most desktop publishing applications support the JPEG file format; however, in case you don't have an application that supports JPEG, we've provided an application to decompress and save your image in a TIFF format.

Macintosh Picture Decompress®

1. Insert the PhotoDisc CD into your CD-ROM drive and double-click the PhotoDisc icon appearing on your desktop.
2. Double-click the Resource folder that appears in the first window.
3. Drag the Picture Decompress icon to your desktop.
4. Double-click the Picture Decompress icon on your desktop. This will launch the application.
5. Double-click the PhotoDisc icon and then double-click the Photos folder.
6. Within the Photos folder, double-click the file you want to decompress.
7. From the File menu bar select Save As. Change the file format to TIFF or PICT and save the image to a folder on your hard drive.
8. Quit Picture Decompress, open your graphic design or page layout application, locate the desired image from your hard drive and open or import the image into your application.

Note: Picture Decompress requires 15 – 40MB of allocated RAM to open the hi-res images. If you don't have the required RAM, activate Virtual Memory in your Memory control panel. Please reference your Macintosh Users Guide if you need assistance.

We've streamlined our licensing plan so that it's easier than ever to use royalty-free digital stock photography. Our two categories of licensing are Comping License and Basic License.

Comping License

The Comping License applies to all images on your Comping Disc and any images that you download free from the PhotoDisc website. Use these images in your initial layouts and to create comps to show your clients and colleagues.

Basic License

The Basic License applies to any image over comping size (150k) that you purchase from PhotoDisc. You may use these images in any project, including any advertising, promotion or editorial project, either electronically (such as in web design) or in print, as well as any packaging (including for music, video and software), any books (including jackets and interior pages), and any item for sale, regardless of quantity produced. Your Basic License includes an automatic 10-seat license. If you want to share an image with more than 10 people (including you), contact PhotoDisc, by email at license@photodisc.com, or by phone at 1 800 528 3472 (US and Canada) or +1 206 441 9355 (international), to ask about our inexpensive seat-license extension.

Please click on the appropriate license in the sidebar on the left or see the printed license agreement that comes with each product for full details on our licensing plan. For further license information, call your local PhotoDisc office. See Contacting PhotoDisc for telephone numbers.

Code: V53 Step into our time tunnel and venture back to a postwar, atomic-age America that's rife with possibility, great expectations and savoir-faire. Retro Americana 3 captures this wholesome nostalgia in glorious black and white — and gray flannel, of course. This versatile disc presents suave ladies and gentlemen going about their ways — at business, at leisure and at home — with oodles of verve, jetpack-charged by the space age. Perky boys and garrulous girls vie for attention with ice skaters, bathing beauties, equestrians, typists, housewives, dentists, grocers, babies, businessmen and towering cityscapes. Plenty of timeless fun from yesterday for today and tomorrow.

Code: V52 Global business binds us together like never before, and this varied disc explores the connections through striking images capturing the multicultural “art” of commerce. Pounds, dollars, yen and other currencies parade here, scintillating and burning, or suspended in blocks of ice; people of various ethnicities speak the lingua franca of business, captured primarily by noted photographer Doug Menez; skyscrapers evoke metropolises such as New York, London, Tokyo; keyboards, gears, laptops and cellphones flesh out this vernacular and add resonance.

These carefully selected images are about the sports you do — not necessarily watch — and have metaphorical meaning leagues beyond the muddy pitch, the treacherous green, the steep incline, the single-track trail or the dusty softball diamond where they take place. There are no limits here: swim, climb, shoot, swing, sweep, throw, sprint, kayak, blade, sail. Do anything except sit there quietly and stare.

Skin gleams from total body treatments, facials and careful protection from the sun. Includes both men's and women's grooming shots. This disc — featuring the work of Jonnie Miles, Suza Scalora, Jules Frazier, Justin Bavosi and others — is rich with editorial potential.

Code: V45 From connecting with friends in a cyber cafe to spending a lazy morning lingering over the Sunday paper, this disc covers moments spent off the clock. Includes all age groups, from kids on a playground and young adults on the beach to grandparents reading to children and older people living alone. We also made a point of including diverse ethnicities and sexual orientations to help bridge the gap between “stock photography” and the world we all live in.

Code: SS30 Rochester, NY-based photographer Jim Wehtje renders ordinary objects extraordinary with X-Ray Vision. This revealing disc slices life in such a way that telephones, alarm clocks, light bulbs, starfish, flowers, even a burger and fries, become unique, unusual objects to consider and contemplate. Striking color — added by PhotoDisc's own Digital Imaging Studio — enhances these transparent images and reverberates to their pictured cores. Wehtje, whose clients include Money magazine and Compaq, specializes in abstract-texture and small-object photography. "The beauty is already there," he notes. "It's just a matter of bringing it out — with flair."

Code: SS29 This electrifying disc illuminates high-tech innerspace, spellbinding us with its ethereal, multicolored beauty and constant diversity of form. Noted New York photographer Nick Koudis captures computer chips, circuit boards, springs, switches, fiber-optic strands, vacuum tubes, gauges and resistors as though he's on an exotic techno-safari in a place where no one's ever dared set foot. Koudis, who's responsible for the stunning Signature Series discs Time and Technology and Colorful Contrasts, describes himself as "a power-kite-flying, model-making, wacked-out photographer" who specializes in "shooting the unusual."

Code: SS28 The lay of the land inspires us, captivates us. When viewed on the printed page or on the screen, it can transport us to that place, perhaps stirring memories, hopes, desires or dreams. Wilderness photographer-videographer Robert Glusic's grand scenic vistas — gathered here as Panoramic Views — inspire wonder within us with what is about us: desert landscapes emote fiery orange energy; snow-capped peaks leak icy blue electricity; dense forests divulge their darkest secrets; ocean waves, alight with white spume, roar their contentment.

Code: SS27 The very global nature of high-tech, fast-paced business today has transformed the modern business person into a kind of warrior-wanderer, scrambling about in often harsh, hostile, unforgiving environments. Think of a besuited brave Ulysses with cellphone and laptop battling adverse market conditions rather than ravenous mythical beasts. Seattle-based photographer Adam Crowley takes us into this strange black-and-white world where the “deal” is often not what it seems.

Code: SS25 We begin to see the little conspiracies of the object world against our carefully laid agendas. Find here a gathering of normally reliable objects, suddenly bruised, bent, burnt, broken or bedraggled, defying the docile cooperation we've come to expect from our forks, alarm clocks, umbrellas, guitar strings, fountain pens and milk glasses. Potent symbols of annoyance, malfunction and sabotage, artfully rendered by Atlanta photographer Janis Christie, illustrate who's winning in the daily tug of war with entropy.

You won't find people in his collection of lifestyle-oriented images, yet each shot resonates with the human touch, as if someone had just moved beyond the frame's edge. Code: SS21 “A new beauty has been added to the splendor of the world — the beauty of speed,” Italian playwright and futurist Tommaso Marinetti said in 1909.

Now, nine decades later, New York photographer Nick Koudis reinterprets the beauty of speed and our relationship with technology. In this collection, Koudis’s lens captures an insightful view of the late-20th-century race to do more, go faster ... until a common refrain flashes on screen: “please wait ...”.

Code: SS20 The human form is seen anew through mesmerizing colors and intriguing angles. Suza Scalora's images are more than studies in anatomy; they're statues, stories and rich human allegories. Old and young, male and female, timeless and futuristic, these images offer miles of curves and capture the essence of what it means to be comfortable in one's own skin.

Code: SS18 What do computer keys, quartz light bulbs, ultrasounds and bar codes have in common? They've all fallen under the spell of Atlanta-based photographer Steve Cole's probing aesthetic. Bridging yesterday's industrial hardware with today's science and technology advances, these images highlight the basic beauty of 20th-century gadgetry — from paperclips to network cables. Science and technology are pared down to an elemental simplicity.

Code: SS17 The connections are clear: these duos include best friends, siblings, lovers, even business partners. Barbara Penoyar's striking portraits focus on the intrigue of relationships, celebrating the ties that bind. Somehow you just know that this twosome must have been friends forever, and that those toddlers are fast becoming bosom buddies. As filmmaker Kenneth Branagh put it: "Friendship is one of the most tangible things in a world which offers fewer and fewer supports."

Code: BS23 Denver-based artists Jayne Harnett-Hargrove and Lonnie Hanzon dabble, with DaVinci-esque vigor, in things both mechanical and biological. Resembling pages from a Renaissance sketchbook or notebook, this disc dazzles with timeless studies — presented as monoprints and etchings — of classical columns and cornices, crowns, bells, astrolabes, birds, shells, wings, feathers, human eyes and human hearts. Ornate, near-abstract calligraphy embellishes these lavish backgrounds, burnished further by watercolor-like washes. Centuries are eloquently bridged here, creating a never-never land of limitless design opportunity.

The Studio Dog, creator of our best-selling Background disc, Studio Geometry, has created a masterful collection of world views using hand-painted globes and relief maps. To create these compelling images, globes were constructed of rusted metals, clay, paint, weathered boards or brushed aluminum, photographed as a whole and then shot to detail countries or regions. Code: OS38 Consider Objects of Nature a glimpse inside a natural history museum: a diverse array of flotsam and jetsam, flora and fauna readily available for close inspection, or show and tell. Coconuts, birds' nests, seedlings, logs, feathers, peppers, pea pods, acorns, walnuts, flowers, shells, fossils and sand provide varietal color, shape, texture, substance. Together they help paint the resplendent face of nature, as they depict the concepts of growth and the ever-changing cycles of time and permanence.

Code: OS37 Retro People presents men, women and children from out of the past in classic black and white. These images capture a positively American mix of 1940s – '50s sophisticated charm and squeaky-clean, wide-eyed innocence. Among the friendly folk you'll find here are businessmen in gray flannel suits, elegantly attired couples ready for a night on the town, boys and girls in natty school dress, and young ladies lounging in frilly undergarments or, with a nod to the '60s, in the occasional modish dress.

Code: OS36 Moments in Life captures everyday objects that mark the many passages in our lives from brand-spanking-new babyhood to the autumnal years of grandparenthood. For the most part you'll find simple things here — important, in retrospect, for sentimental reasons: a pacifier, a crib, toys, a lunch box, a diploma and a wedding ring. More day-to-day “moments” include milk and cookies, laundry, groceries, a diary, and hot dogs and hamburgers on the grill. Toddlers, school kids, teens, parents and grandparents round out this domestic panorama of American life.

Code: OS35 Individuals, art-directed by Clement Mok, pumps up the panache with plenty that's brash and idiosyncratic. Men and women of various ethnicities simply show you what they're about: burnished bodybuilders of both sexes share the spotlight with a silver-jacketed, black-lipsticked hipster; a bowler-hatted, handlebar-mustachioed, ponytailed old-timer; a frizzy-coifed, black-turtlenecked groover; a spiky-haired, loud-shirted prankster. Captured here you'll find style as substance and substance style — of a highly individualized order.

Each instrument takes center stage to give a solo performance, giving you a chance to see the intricate details and master craftsmanship, not to mention some of the performers involved in creating music — including the sine qua non of any band or orchestra: the conductor. You can almost hear the clarinet, saxophone, trumpet, French horn, violin, guitar and sitar. A rich, cultural representation.

Code: FA08 The late 19th and early 20th centuries have been called America's Golden Age of illustration. And for business and industry, it was an age of tremendous growth: the birth of trains, planes and automobiles collided with a rapid rise in national periodicals. It was an era full to bursting with hard work, new frontiers and mechanical potential. It was also a time when illustrators were celebrities, a time when Norman Rockwell and Winslow Homer were household names.

Our new collection captures the highlights of America's industrial growth spurt through original illustrations that shaped the way millions of people saw industry and invention. And you'll be able to see it too: from politicians and farm workers to automobiles and skyscrapers.

Code: FA07 What makes illustrations of children so enticing and evocative? Is it their honesty? Their ebullience? Their innocence? Their sensitivity? Their curiosity? Whatever the appeal, children of all ages and from all ages are gathered together here: dancing, playing, eating, sleeping and meandering through imaginative lands of make-believe.

Illustration has been called the “democratic” art form, and in this lively and accessible collection the assertion certainly rings true. These illustrated children — rendered in muted and vibrant colors, simple pen and ink — are pulled from the pages of time, spanning centuries and continents, and tapping universal symbols, myths and memories along the way. These timeless tots live on.

Code: FA06 Think of religion as inspiration: our muses of faith have inspired more art than perhaps even love. During the past 2000 years people have used canvas, paint, clay, chisels and stone to celebrate religion. They have hoisted hearts with painting; they have awed with architecture.

Here is faith as fine art, inspired by the enduring majesty of religion. Here are Christians and Jews and Moslems; here are their cathedrals and temples and mosques. In this collection is the essence of religion, the reverent and irreverent, in watercolor and painting and line drawing. As you browse the images in this unique disc, you'll see the beautiful results of two millenniums of art and enlightenment.

Code: FA04 The New World. Knit together by railroad and radio, turn-of-the-century America found itself at the forefront of the Industrial Revolution. Between the Gay Nineties and the Roaring Twenties, this classic PhotoDisc collection captures the optimistic upheaval of the times.

Rendered by the finest artisans of the day, these images first debuted as ads, magazine covers and traditional works of art. Use them to spark your imagination as you evoke an era of pastoral picnics and freshly minted Model T's colliding in the color and texture of America's Golden Age.

Code: FA03 The Age of Exploration. Caught in the amber of a forgotten time, this compilation of maps and heraldic images displays the intricate artistry of a world long past. In textures of faded parchment and delicate scrollwork, the mythic talismen of Greece, Rome and Europe come to life.

For the modern artist these artifacts offer a wealth of lost color, background and culture. Like the cartographers of old, you'll find in the ancient world a starting point for new explorations and designs.

Code: FA02 The Belle Époque. At the end of the 19th century, Paris was in the midst of a creative explosion. European war and rumors of war had yet to touch the City of Lights, and in this fair-weather climate Art Noveau burst onto the scene. Curiously enough, this “new art” had as its inspiration an ancient origin: traditional Japanese engraving.

Cafés fill with artists. Names emerge — Jules Chéret, Albert Guillaume, Lucien Lefevre and, of course, Toulouse-Lautrec. Art moves out of the museums and onto the streets, appearing as posters, affiches and handbills. They're all here and, as you scroll through this unique collection, you'll almost feel the extraordinary energy of the times.

Code: FA01 The Old World. From the Renaissance to modernism, Italy dominated the arts much as Rome once dominated the world. And like the Roman army before them, the art schools of Florence, Venice and Rome marched northward across Europe conquering everything in their path. To this day, the art of Europe and the world is still influenced by a history of embracing, revitalizing and finally rebelling against the Italian ideal.

Our collection traces this march of time and technique from the 14th to the 20th century, featuring such works as Botticelli's "Allegory of Spring," Raphael's "Sistine Madonna," and Previati's "La Corovana." You'll feel like a modern day patrone with some of the greatest works of Western civilization at your fingertips.

Code: AS02 / AS02 PRO* A shadow passes behind a door, teeth chatter, a light bulb clicks on. You'll find a hand counting down — 5-4-3-2-1 — in Japanese, English, French, German and Spanish. The sounds of change clink into a piggy bank, while a spider moves up and down its thread. Others: billiards, clocks, compasses, robots. Code: AS01 / AS01 PRO* The drum roll begins ... pull a rabbit out of the hat (we mean that quite literally). A cat turns its head and purrs, a golden retriever sits and pants, and a duck quacks. There's more than animals, of course: gears grind, flags flap in the breeze, a fan spins, a cup of coffee steams. Too many to list here; too fun for you to pass up. Preview them in sound and motion at www.photodisc.com.
