1.3 Instructions

                Intructions

   This little utility assign your programms, generating a script.
It also includes an option to create these scripts, where you ca make your assign, and the posibility to load the programm using only one file.
There is also an option for adding assigns to your User-startup.

   To create a normal assign, without creating a file, you just have to inset the name of the prog (ex. "Sources:"), and then insert the path where the program can be found. There is the posibility to push a buttom with a sign like this "¶" It opens a requester where you can insert the path more easy, may the name or the pathname is too long for the box, but with this requester you will have no problem. If you want to generate a script, just do the same as above, insert first the name of the executable, and after that you must choose where you want the script being safed.
After that click on "create" and thats it.
Adding assigns to your User-Startup is the same as above just choose "Addind to User" and thats it.

    There will apear 2 button asking for "another assign" or "Proceed" that means that if you need to create more assigns just click on another one, if you finish, than click on proceed.
If you choose to add the assign(s) to your user-Startup, that means that it will generate the next script:

;BEGIN Commentary (Assign...)
;END Commentary

1.4 Install
