

Dave Hill

Dave Hill is only the third chief engineer in Corvette history but he has already shown that he belongs in the company of such Corvette greats as Duntov and McLellan. Hill came to the Corvette team from Cadillac, where he was the engineering program manager and chief engineer on the Allante. He hit the ground at warp speed in 1992 on the Corvette program, and the results of his efforts are before you in the pages of this magazine. In the words of Michael Antonick: "Compared to the tenures of the previous two chief engineers, Hill has been in the position a short while. But he has made his mark. The future of the Corvette is in his hands, and it has never looked better."