

Welcome to Terrapin FTP

Terrapin FTP is as 'offline' Internet FTP client for Windows 95.

It aims to minimise the connection time needed to locate files and resources on remote FTP sites. When a site is visited with Terrapin FTP, information is collected on the folders and files which are held there. The information can be retained locally and browsed offline.

Permanent catalogues of Internet resources can be created using a number of indexing and searching features. Terrapin FTP automatically manages synchronization between a local catalogue and the real site.

The transition between working off-line and on-line with Terrapin FTP is seamless. A connection will only be attempted if the information is not already held locally or where a file is to be transferred.

Whether working on-line or off-line Terrapin FTP provides a standard Windows 95 Explorer like interface. Folders and files on a remote site can be treated in much the same manner as if they were on your local computer.

To Install Terrapin FTP

If you have not already done so run setup.exe on the distribution disks. The setup program will guide you through all the necessary steps to install Terrapin FTP.

Using Example Servers

Setup will install a number of example catalogues of remote FTP sites. The examples can be browsed off-line (select Server..Open from Terrapin FTP's main menu).

When viewing the examples stick to the yellow folders unless you want to connect.

Note that the examples may have been created some time ago and the catalogues will not have been refreshed. Some files and folders may not still exist or the site may have been restructured. Refresh the folders if you want to be sure.

The default download directory of all example servers is set to C:\. If you want to retrieve files using the examples and do not want to clutter your root directory then change the default download directory using View...Server Options and select Connection properties.
