

David6
May 10,1991

(This letter has 7 misspelled words)

123 Harvard Street
Plant City, Ct 03567

The Academy of Literature
245 Literary Plaza
New York, NY 10001

I am forwarding an item which I would appreciate seeing published in the Books Of The World.

My daughter, who lives in New York has been awarded a certificate of membership into the American Literary Institute.

This is a National club with a unique requirement for membership. The applicant must take written examinations.

The applicant must achieve an I.Q. score such that he or she falls into the top 2% of the population.

The American Literary Institute has representatives in all major cities. They are actively seeking persons who can meet the requirements for membership.

It is my understanding that this organization has members worldwide. They have regular meetings and discuss new books; current thinking on Eastern philosophy; world literature and subjects relating to the literary world.

Anyone interested in this organization can write for information. They can attend some meetings by contacting a local representative. The representative will gladly review the dates on meeting; the dates when new exams will be given for membership.

The organization is very proud of many of its members who have distinguished themselves in business, science, and the teaching profession. The group boasts three Nobel Laureates and a fourth has just been awarded some high-ranking medal.

This literary group is well respected in the arts and sciences. They contribute lots of their time helping other organizations to improve their standards.

I understand that a National convention has been announced to take place in Chicago May 15, 1992. It would be nice if we all can attend this meeting. Will be interesting.

Sincerely,

Johnston McMurphy
Chancellor,
College of Arts and Sciences
University City, New York

(Spell Check
there are 7 misspelled
words)

Use for graphics

