

Mold and Botrytis Blight

These diseases are widespread in humid areas, especially on strawberry, peony, lily, tulip, rose, dogwood, and geranium plants. They attack flowers, buds, fruit, and tender shoot growth. Molds grow profusely on plant surfaces, similar to rots. Botrytis is common on soft, ripe fruits, especially after they're picked. But they may appear before harvest in humid weather.