

CHAIRMAN, PRESIDENTIAL COMMITTEE TO STUDY CORRELATION OF INFLATION AND MINORITY UNEMPLOYMENT IN NEW YORK, CHICAGO, AND LOS ANGELES, 1989-1990.

As chairman of this committee, I supervised and integrated the research of three teams conducting studies in three metropolitan areas. From my headquarters in Washington, D.C., with a small office staff, I directed the research of regional teams and joined various teams at critical points in the project. When regional research was completed, I brought team leaders to Washington, where we compiled four important reports – an integrated report and three regional reports.

SENIOR ECONOMIST, BANK OF THE PACIFIC, Los Angeles, California, 1986-1989.

Assisted by two staff economists and, when needed, the research staff of the investment review section, personal trust division, I maintained constant surveillance over economic environment of the bank, consulting with top management, issuing reports, and conducting ad hoc research on financial trends, economic outlook, foreign and domestic financial markets, effects of government actions, industrial developments, and social trends. In addition to my weekly report to senior management, I served as senior editor of "Investment Outlook," prepared by analysts from the personal trust division. My analyses of inflation attracted the attention of the President's Economic Advisory Board and led to my appointment to Presidential committees, noted above. Although on leave of absence from the Bank of the Pacific when I served on Presidential committees, I resigned officially to become Chief Economist, Foundation for American Economic Growth.

ECONOMIC ANALYST, REMINGTON ART AND SCHOOL SUPPLIES, INC., Gary, Indiana, 1981-1986.

This large manufacturer of chalk, crayon, inks, pens, drawing paper, and other supplies for artists and schools has annual sales of $150,000,000. It is the parent of three wholly owned subsidiaries.

As economic analyst, I kept the president and treasurer constantly apprised of the economic environment of the firm and trends of government, finance, marketing, inflation, labor, raw material production, and international conditions. In addition, I prepared special studies on subjects ranging from salary structures to growth in school populations. When the treasurer of Remington became senior vice-president of the Bank of the Pacific, he invited me to join the staff of that bank as senior economist.

INSTRUCTOR IN ECONOMICS, METROPOLITAN UNIVERSITY, New York, 1979-1981.

While completing my Doctor of Philosophy degree at Metropolitan, I taught courses in general economics, monetary policy, and statistics in the Department of Economics, School of Commerce, Metropolitan University.
