

◇ On The WWW Announcement...

Life, ESPECIALLY Intelligent life in Lubbock, that's BIG news some places <grin>

--wru (posted by comp.sys.mac.announce admin)

Editor's Response: Yes folks, that's right. The LOL Newsletter Web Site went up on August 7th. We have a HTMLized version of the newsletter online, as well as a ton of Mac links and other stuff of interest. For more info, please see the Life OnLine article in this issue.

The URL for the newsletter is <http://rampages.onramp.net/~rtfm>

◇ And More On The WWW Announcement...

From what I could see, I really enjoyed the site and the humourous writing about the page itself and I enjoyed the article on Copland. I'll add a link to you guys/gals in the next couple of days. Here's looking forward to a more HTMLized version of your newsletter...

Andrew C. Williams (bubba@europa.com)
MacMania - <http://www.europa.com/~bubba/mac/appleindex.html>

Editor's Response: Thanks for adding us to your Mac site. MacMania is a fantastic compendium of Macintosh Web Resources. If you can, stop by and give it a look.

◇ And Yet More On The WWW Announcement...

I appreciate your appreciation/accommodation of my opinions. It's hard to find people/service who value opinions of their "customers", which is why there are so many failures.

Now that you said you welcome my opinions, ;-) may I say that the part of your signature,

>Obligatory witty saying:

>If your point-of-view isn't changing,
>then you must be standing still.

is making your already somewhat long signature too long and maybe boring, unless you could (desirably automatically) insert different quote each time? ;-)

Thank you for your quick response. I've never seen a quicker turnaround anywhere else.

Cheers,
John Kim (jounghwoo@tobor.usc.edu)

Editor's Response: John wrote in questioning our practice of only placing some of each issue on the web. Due to his response and many others like it, we are making a complete HTML version of each issue, starting with this one. I have also changed my sig line. Thanks again, John!

◇ A Friendly Note

I reviewed three net publications tonight. Yours was head and shoulders above the rest. It was by far the most interesting and readable. One of the others was uninteresting and the other was unreadable. Please keep up the good work.

Pete Cyr (petecyr@infi.net)

Editor's Response: Thanks for the kind words. We feel like we are starting over again with all of the changes the newsletter has been through in the last three months. We plan on keeping this publication going for quite a while, so we promise to keep up the good work.

◇ Thanks for Subscribing...

No, thank you! I have certainly had a fun time with your previous two publications that I've seen. (downloaded from info-mac)

Thanks again, regards..Joel

Joel Southwick (joels@trib.com)

-----
If you've got a comment or criticism about the LOL Newsletter, just drop me a note at rtfm@onramp.net. You might even be printed here. I should also say that we reserve the right to print or not print any correspondence, not to mention the right to edit such correspondence as necessary.

Mark Brooks
Editor Life OnLine