Special Thanks to Jeff Click, Sound Maestro.
Jeff creates worked with me on the creation of both the first page this issue.
Jeff publishes the CLIXSOUNDS AV e-zine every month which is devoted to the audio Macintosh experience.

The cover sound was created especially for us and is courtesy of CLIXSOUNDS with portions clipped from the Marathon II Preview.
You can contact ClixSounds at clix@ionet.net.

The freeware font Village TT is used in many titles.
It was created by Mark F. Heiman.
He can be reached at mheiman@carleton.edu.

We must thank Austin Shoemaker for the Copland screenshots.
They were a big help this issue, as was the information on his Copland Info home page:
<<http://www.netline.net/~austin/cops/cops.html>>.

The Life OnLine Newsletter is a free publication.

There are no dues, fees, or colored beads involved.

We always aim for the truth in our articles and reviews,
but sometimes the arrow wavers.

The Life OnLine Newsletter is always looking for submissions.
Unfortunately, you will only earn our respect in return.
For submissions, please contact the e-mail address above.

The Life OnLine Newsletter is written on a volunteer basis.
We do not receive any money at this time from any source.
We are, however, open to change.

Life OnLine Vol 2, Issue 3 copyright 1995 by RTFM Productions.
Please e-mail to get permission before copying any articles.
The newsletter as a whole, unaltered, may be freely distributed.

TFM Productions was formed by Mark Brooks,
then the editor of Lubbock OnLine, in May of 1995.
The name of this newsletter was then changed to Life OnLine, and it is now a product of RTFM Productions.

Through an agreement with Mark Wall, creator of DOCMaker, RTFM Productions also provides unique custom documentation for software developers in the DOCMaker format.

In addition, RTFM Productions is currently offering HTML services.
For an example of our work, check out the RTFM web site at <<http://rampages.onramp.net/~rtfm>>.
