

Hot, arid climates can be challenging to landscape. Make things easier by choosing native plants and low- or no-water ground covers. A nice, thick layer of mulch at the base of your plants helps to keep the roots cool, as well as slowing evaporation. Using hardscape elements, such as large boulders, helps fill out the design without overtaxing your irrigation system.