

Balance and harmonize your existing garden or landscape with a creative Feng Shui solution. The curving path leading to the front door is slightly off-center to keep bad energy from entering the home. The front door is protected even further with large plants or trees. The jade plant to the side of the front door attracts abundance and prosperity. Control the tiger with the rocks and white flowering plants in the southwest corner of your lot. The light and abundance of plants in the southeast side of the garden is favorable to the dragon. The northeast sector has a flowering tree, such as a flowering plum or magnolia, a small herb garden, and a paved curving path. A small fountain or birdbath can be added to the direct north. The rock patio in the northwest area provides a soothing place for the family to gather.
