

As more and more people become interested in cooking with fresh herbs, backyard herb gardens have flourished. Frequently, these gardens look as if they were put in as an afterthought, but with a little planning they can be incorporated into a landscape that is practical as well as pretty. Be creative...a border of sage smells wonderful, looks gorgeous, and adds a delicious flavor to soups and stews.