

Urban dwellers in particular frequently run out of yard before running out of ambition. Maximize your small space by using plants that are taller than they are wide and massing them close together. Airy, open plants like roses appear less bulky and allow for plantings underneath. To block an unpleasant view, choose tall, attractive fences that take up very little space horizontally while still providing a nice visual break.