

Greetings!

Infotivity Technologies, Inc. is a developer of standard and custom Windows applications and Help resources. We've just introduced a new development tool named HyperAct™, and this is our way of helping you out.

There are many people who need help with just one aspect of Windows or another. We felt that if we used HyperAct to create many "applets" to help in each of these areas we could help many people, and therefore many people would see first hand what HyperAct can do. We originally wanted to provide all of these free but found out that was not possible since application versions change frequently. There was no way we could keep these "control" applets accurate without incurring tremendous cost. So we decided to make one the most important ones FREE and charge a small maintenance fee for the others. We want to break even!

Enjoy! We hope you find this applet useful!