About User Word Lists

A word list is a list of words or phrases accessed by WordPerfect* when you proof your document using the writing tools. For example, Spell Checker scans all active word lists when you spell-check a document.

WordPerfect scans two types of word list: user word lists and main word lists. You can have ten lists of each type active when you use the writing tools. WordPerfect first scans the active user word lists. If the word or phrase is not found there, WordPerfect scans the active main word lists.

user word list

A list of words and phrases that you want Spell Checker or Grammatik* to skip, replace, or display alternatives for. For example, you can specify replacements for words you often mistype or misspell. Or, you can add words (such as your name) that you want WordPerfect* to skip when you use Spell Checker or Grammatik.

You can create multiple user word lists. User word list files have the extension .uwl. The word list that ships with WordPerfect is Wt61XX.uwl (where "XX" is the code for your language).

Each document has its own user word list to which you can add words and phrases that pertain specifically to that document.

Spell Checker and Grammatik always scan the document user word list first.

About Using Word Lists Together

You can activate as many as ten user word lists and ten main word lists for spell-checking and proofreading. For example, if you want Spell Checker to scan both the U.S. English and the Canadian English main word lists, select both main word lists. If you work in the medical profession, you can select a third-party medical word list that is compatible with WordPerfect* 7.

WordPerfect first scans the active user word lists in the order they appear in the Word lists box, and then scans the active main word lists in order. You can change the order of word lists by removing them and then adding them again in the Word lists box (removing a word list does not delete it from your hard drive or network).

Unless you have a main word list (.mor or .lex file) added for your language, you cannot activate other main word lists you have added. (Activating multiple word lists is also known as chaining word lists.)

About Replacement Words

You can define replacement words and phrases in a user word list. If you want QuickCorrect* to replace a word automatically as you type it, define only one replacement for the word. If you define more than one replacement for a word, you can choose the replacement you want when Spell Checker stops on the word. Here are some examples of how you can use this feature:

 If there is a word you often type incorrectly, you can define the correctly spelled word as a replacement. For example, you could specify "the" as a replacement for "hte".

 You can replace abbreviations or acronyms with spelled out words or phrases. For example, you could define Chief Executive Officer as the replacement for the acronym CEO.

 You can define lists of alternatives for a word. For example, you could type "hc" and have the alternative words "Halva International Corporation," "Halva International," and "Halva" appear in the Replacements list box. Then, during a spell-check or proofreading session, you could select which alternative phrase you want to replace "hc."

About Language

As you use Spell Check or Grammatik, you can use the Language feature to check formatting conventions of another language.

For example, you can have Grammatik* or Spell Checker format all the dates in your document in the language you select (such as 12 avril 1996 for French).

You do not need an additional language module to check formatting conventions in another language. However, if you want to check the spelling or grammar of a document in another language, you must purchase the module for that language.
