Birthday Reminder

Birthday Reminder has only one simple task, that is to remind you of Birthdays (and a little extra).

This is the windows version of our succesful DOS-version HAPPY.EXE which proved very popular in both domestic and office-environments.

Many network-administrators liked the idea of giving a little service on this subject so, here we are, on the windows platform.

One uses BATHAPPY to enter new birthdays or other festivities.

The actual reporting is done by the Birthday-launcher 'HapLauncher'.

HapLauncher

HapLauncher is the work-horse of Birthday Reminder
HapLauncher reads the birthday file and launches all events to the screen.

It is a good idea to keep the HapLauncher in your Windows startup group so you will not miss out on birthdays.

The search-scope and soundoption of the Launcher may be set in the BATHAPPY options menu.

Past events appear in red current day events appear in blue future events appear in green

Launcher Options

Search-scope

By default the Launcher only looks for birthdays for the current day. On a monday it additionally reports birthdays that took place during the weekend.

You can arrange for the Launcher to look for a fixed number of days ahead or back, according to your needs. The number of days should be between the range of 0-31 days.

Sound option

When set on, the launcher plays a familiar happy tune through the systems speaker whenever it has something to report for the current day. It does not stir for past or future events.

We have learned that especially office-users particularly like this option.

However, it can be switched off if you want the Launcher to be silent.

BatHappy itself does not use the sound-option, however, you can test the tempo in the Launcher-settings to make it sound as you think it should.
