

This part of the temple was left aside as a final resting place for the poor men and women who died digging the gold and the gems which kept their relatives alive. From where you are standing, you can see some bones. The air inside the chapel is stale.
Is it your nerves, or there's really something moving inside?